125,000 Gas Users Begin Registering Here Today

Traffic Continues To Diminish; Ickes Urges 8-Point Plan To Speed Deliveries

With an anticipated 125,000 motorists registering here today through Thursday for gasoline rationing cards, a welter of developments came yesterday—but none that would bring gasoline into the tank for the customary pleasure driving. The developments included:

1. A call by Petroleum Coordinator Ickes to the oil industry to adopt an eight-point program to increase shipments of oil and gasoline into the Eastern shortage area.

2. A visible falling off of traffic here, reported by the Department of Vehicles and Traffic.

3. A ruling that civilian defense workers, when actually engaged in official tasks, will be permitted gasoline without ration cards.

4. Gasoline, scarce over the weekend, was back in quantity yesterday as a part of the stations' monthly allotments arrived. Individual stations sold it in such quantities as each chose to do.

5. The Office of Price Administration warned automobile tourists on the Eastern seaboard to depart before the rationing takes effect on Friday.

Two questions also loomed uppermost:

"Can I get enough gasoline to drive my car to and from work? Do I have to appear in person to get my ration card?" To the first question, the car owner can get enough gasoline for the survival of his business interests upon proving how much gasoline his business interests require. To the second question, the owner or his agent may appear for the card.

Then, with rationing no further ahead than Friday and with registrants to be strictly on their honor in stating their gasoline requirements, the Department of Vehicles was reported to have been swamped yesterday by car owners for information on whether they could reclassify private vehicles into the commercial class, which would permit them more gasoline.

Each According to His Need

The rationing board also pointed out that:

Anyone who owns an automobile will be able to get an "A" card, the first of which has on it seven

Negro Mess Boy Gets Navy Cross as Pearl Harbor Hero

Doris Miller, Negro, has been awarded the Navy Cross by President Roosevelt for heroism displayed during the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, December 7.

Miller, 23-year-old mess attendant, first class, was commended by Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox more than a month ago. He received an advancement in rating.

In making the award, the President cited Miller for his "distinguished devotion to duty, extraordinary courage and disregard for his own personal safety during the attack."

In his commendation of Miller, Secretary Knox said:

"While at the side of his captain on the bridge, Miller, despite enemy strafing and bombing and in the face of a serious fire, assisted in moving his captain, who had been mortally wounded, to a place of greater safety, and later manned and operated a machine gun until ordered to leave the bridge."

Miller is a native of Waco, Tex.

This Cat's Going To Need All Its Nine Lives

New Orleans, May 11 (U.P.).—Note to Mrs. Julian Herbert's cat: Better lay low at least a week, maybe two.

The last you saw of the madam this morning she was chasing you with revolver in hand. That was after you scratched her on both arms.

Then, as you beat it around the corner, you heard a couple of shots. Well, the first rang out when she tripped over her sleeping son. The bullet entered his right knee.

The second occurred when the Mrs. got excited and hurled the gun into the backyard. It went off again and the bullet hit her in the left foot.

On second thought, you better make it a month.

CHAPTER IX

Keesler Field, Miss., May 11.—At the edge of Biloxi, a drowsy old town down here on the Gulf of Mexico, something is going on which no one could see and still doubt that America will win this war.

A saga of embattled America is being written here, a story of plowshares into swords on a scale which approaches the impossible. And it is only one of many like it that, put together, add up to victory.

Less than a year ago this huge school for aircraft mechanics was a golf course. That is, part of it was a golf course. As it has grown in the last 10 months, Keesler Field has swallowed the Biloxi Country Club, historic Naval Reserve Park, the Biloxi Airport, the town's ball park and a Boy Scout camp. It is still growing.

ANDREWS

While carpenters still hammered on the frames of its barracks buildings it began turning out aircraft mechanics who lived in tents while they attended classes in the old commercial hangar. By the end of June it will have turned out 8500 qualified mechanics; next year it will produce another 25,000, more aircraft mechanics than the United States had altogether when war began in Europe.

These mechanics are the unsung heroes of the Air Force. For every pilot who rides the clouds to glory, 20 of these men must labor on the ground to keep him flying. They are the guards and tackles of the air team, the men who make possible the plays that win.

So badly does the Air Force, growing by leaps and bounds, need them that they are hardly given time to be graduated before they are snapped up by squadrons in the field. Of the 4000 or so already graduated, some by now are overseas, some are at flexible gunnery schools making ready to join bomber combat crews like those training at Hendricks Field, and some of the best are still here teaching others.

This is an urgent business on which the Air Forces have embarked at Keesler Field, so urgent that work never stops. Classes are held day and night, 24 hours a day, six days a week. Students

Curb Inflation By Taxes, Asks Henderson

Implies He Will Back Ceilings on Wages if Stabilization Fails

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Price Administrator Leon Henderson yesterday lined up behind Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau in an Administration fight to win over the House Ways and Means Committee to steeper individual surtaxes and drastic cuts in personal exemptions.

Inflation Threat Cited

In an unscheduled appearance, Henderson joined the Treasury in opposition to a sales tax and told the committee he personally favored even deeper cuts in exemptions than the $600 for single persons and $1200 for married, recommended by Morgenthau.

He testified that taxes alone would not ward off a "highly explosive" threat of inflation. He said stabilization of wages is essential to controlling the increased living costs, and indicated he would urge ceilings on wages if the present wage stabilization program does not work.

While Henderson was testifying, Representative Albert Gore (Democrat), of Tennessee, introduced two bills designed to give "vigorous effect" to the President's seven-point program for controlling inflation.

Enforced Savings Urged

One of these would set up a new three-man war labor board to enforce adjustable ceilings on wages and salaries and propose elimination of the present 110 per cent restriction against parity ceilings on farm goods.

The second proposed a graduated withholding tax to be turned into war bonds for all persons earning

Vinson Sees U. S. Forces Of 9 Million

Gives Views as Pay Increase Measure Is Pushed Toward Vote

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

An Army of between seven and eight million men and a Navy of one million—or a possible total of nine million—are envisioned by Representative Vinson (Democrat) of Georgia as the ultimate man power of these principal branches of America's armed forces.

Vinson, who as chairman of the House Naval Affairs Committee, is in close touch with military and naval requirements for fighting the Axis, made it known that he believes the Nation "eventually" will need forces of this tremendous size yesterday while his committee was considering amendments to legislation increasing the pay of the country's fighting men.

Due for Passage Today

The bill is due for passage in the House today. The House Military Affairs Committee, in reporting the legislation to the House last week, estimated that the proposed pay increases, based on the personnel strength of the armed forces as of last January, would cost approximately 285 million dollars a year.

On the basis of Vinson's view of the man power necessary for victory, the pay rises would cost approximately $1,225,500,000 annually.

Vinson told reporters that his manpower figures were "unofficial." They were considered significant, however, in view of his position.

At the meeting of his committee, Vinson was more definite about the official character of his man power figures than he was when reporters discussed the question with him

Biddle Spikes Rumor of Plan To Let Coughlin Case Slide

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

Attorney General Biddle yesterday spiked whispers that the Charles E. Coughlin sedition prosecution is going to languish and die as a result of the fold-up of the agitator's magazine, Social Justice.

Whether Coughlin or any one else will be indicted for sedition or any other crime, the Attorney General told The Post, will be determined exclusively by the grand jurors who hear the evidence in the case concerned.

More indictments are probable, Biddle said, in the course of the nation-wide investigation of suspected treasonable and seditious operations.

The Attorney General several week ago began a chain of grand jury investigations, in California, Tennessee, Illinois, Kansas, Indiana and in Washington. He has kept in touch with these inquiries, conferring nearly every day with Assistant Attorney General Wendell Berge, the chief of the criminal division whom he placed in command, and with prosecutors who have been handling the details before the grand jury.

Mr. Biddle said yesterday that it would be some weeks before the special grand jury on Axis agents, which began the Social Justice inquiry in Washington, would be ready to make a report.

If it should be found, he said, that the special grand jury could not complete the Coughlin case another grand jury would be set up.

District Area Blackout Set For Tonight

38 Sirens to Signal Half Hour of Total Darkness Between 10 P. M. and 2 A. M.

Washington will undergo its second total blackout within a month when the wail of 38 sirens will plunge the city into a half hour's darkness some time between 10 p. m. tonight and 2 a. m.

The major flaws discovered in the last test will receive special scrutiny by civilian defense officials as the 76,000 members of the Washington area protective services and the million other inhabitants again go through the routine of making Washington invisible from the air, and of organizing to meet any emergency that might result from an actual bombing.

Although the reported breakdown of the communications control center in the April 14 blackout resulted in a dispute between national OCD Director James M. Landis and District Communications Chief Herbert M. Friede as to whether the control system should be centralized or subdivided, Friede's central control system will be used again tonight.

Citizens Asked to Curb Calls

The Landis plan for having at least four subcontrol systems cannot be tested, civilian defense officials reported, because of the extension construction and planning necessary to put it into operation.

One of the Landis recommendations will be followed. Defense Executive Lemuel Bolles has instructed chiefs of services and wardens to cut down on official calls as much as possible. This, it is felt, will eliminate a great deal of the jamming of the telephone switchboards of which Landis complained. Workers are not to report minor incidents to the control center.

Private citizens also are requested to restrict personal calls to a minimum during the half hour.

Police Leave Canceled

From the Friede report on the control system, the Civilian Defense Office is following one suggestion resulting from the confusion at the Control Center which was caused by the presence of too many spectators. Except for the communications staff and the chiefs of services, no one will be admitted to the Control Center without a special pass signed by Defense Coordinator John Russell Young.

The identification and passage of emergency vehicles during the blackout has been clarified, Bolles believes, by an order to wardens that they are not to interfere with traffic, which is the responsibility of the regular and auxiliary police. All days off and leave in the Police Department have been canceled for today.

A fluorescent identification sign for emergency cars will be tested tonight. Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer announced. These signs, 9 by 15 inches, are painted white with a luminous background which make the black printed "Em'rg'ncy" visible to persons on the street as the car approaches. The signs are to be attached to the sun visors of

Hitler Opens Drive in Crimea For Gateway to Caucasus Oil; U. S. Subs Sink 3 Jap Ships

Two Nipponese Cargo Craft and Destroyer Sent Down; 7-Day Toll 26 Sunk or Hit

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

American submarines, striking anew at Japanese supply lines in the Far East, have sunk an enemy destroyer and two cargo vessels, the Navy announced yesterday.

The scene of these latest successes by the Navy's Far Pacific undersea fleet was not given but it was stated that they were "not related to the recent engagement in the Coral Sea."

Counting the heavy blows struck at Japanese sea power in that victorious battle and American undersea activity in other Asiatic waters, Japanese losses for the past seven days total 26 ships sunk or damaged.

Fleet Auxiliary a Victim

One of the cargo ships announced yesterday as sunk by United States subs was a fleet auxiliary, the Navy communique indicated, while the other simply was described as a "medium-sized cargo ship"—presumably a freighter.

In the war to date, American submarines have sunk 42 Japanese ships, more than one-third of the Navy's total bag of 108 Nipponese craft of all types.

Official Navy tabulations show 43 Jap warships and 63 supply and other noncombatant craft as sunk, besides 73 craft that have been damaged. The latter total includes 12 ships listed as "sunk or probably sunk," 13 described as "believed sunk" and three ships reported as "possibly sunk."

There have been no War Department tabulations of sinkings by Army action in recent weeks, but unofficial compilations, based on communiques show more than 230 Jap vessels sunk or damaged in the war to date.

Total of 256 Sunk

These are losses inflicted by the American Army and Navy alone. Estimates prepared by the Associated Press of the toll taken by all United Nation's forces, list a total of 256 Japanese vessels as sunk in the war to date.

Included in the total are a Japanese battleship, 2 aircraft carriers, 18 cruisers, 27 destroyers and 19 submarines—a sizable chunk of the Nipponese fleet.

Meanwhile, officials here awaited receipt of fuller details of the great battle of the Coral Sea in which American naval and air forces soundly whipped the Japanese. Advices from Australia declared that United Nations' forces were pursuing what was left of the enemy fleet defeated in last week's action.

American losses in the battle have not been announced yet because they might be helpful to the enemy, but communiques issued here and in Australia strongly indicate that they were light.

Martinique No Longer Under Vichy Control, U. S. Tells Envoy

By H. K. Reynolds
International News Service Staff Writer

Secretary of State Hull yesterday spurned efforts of the Petain-Laval government to intervene in the negotiations by which the United States is seeking wartime jurisdiction over French possessions in the Caribbean.

French Ambassador Gaston Henry-Haye called at the State Department under instructions from Vichy to request an explanation of the American proposals to the French high commissioner in Martinique. He was told that this Government no longer recognizes Vichy's authority in the Antilles, and will continue to deal directly with the local French authorities.

Confronted therefore with a virtual fait accompli—since the Martinique negotiations are understood to be approaching a satisfactory conclusion — the Ambassador echoed hopes of American officials that an amicable agreement will be reached.

The State Department, in the meantime, awaited further reports from President Roosevelt's special diplomatic mission, Admiral John H. Hoover, commander of the Caribbean sea front, and Samuel Reber, assistant chief of the State Department's division of European affairs.

They arrived in Fort-de-France, Martinique, on Saturday by plane

Chinese Drive Enemy Back Into Burma

Battle at Lashio With Reinforcements Rushed To Invasion Column

By the United Press

Chungking, May 11. — China's Yunnan Province army, supported by American fliers, has sent the battered remnant of a Japanese invasion column reeling 24 miles back to the Burma border, where heavy fighting is raging with Japanese reinforcements rushed up from Lashio, it was announced tonight.

American Volunteer Group fliers were credited in an A. V. G. communique with killing 200 Japanese and wrecking 100 trucks in an attack late Sunday, third raid of that day against the Japanese who charged into Yunnan from Burma to be all but destroyed in a battle at Chefang that cost them 4500 dead.

The remnants of this force were reported already to have evacuated Wanting, on the Chinese side of the border, because the reinforcements from Lashio, Burma Road terminus in Burma, failed to arrive on time.

Trucks Riddled

The American fighter planes riddled the Japanese trucks with machine-gun bullets, setting them afire or hopelessly damaging their machinery.

The fighters also dropped a few bombs. One pilot said at least 12 big explosions occurred in the Japanese ranks, one among a group of armored cars and another on two trucks which were carrying gasoline and munitions.

"We made five low passes at them," the pilot said, adding further A. V. G. strafing today was not necessary "because the Chinese troops will take care of the Japs now."

Salween Forces Hold Out

Unless the Jap reinforcements make an unexpectedly strong stand at the border, the Chinese are expected to drive on 68 miles to Lashio.

Meanwhile, Lashio was threatened from behind by a Chinese force which recaptured ruined Mandalay and Maymyo, 30 miles east of Mandalay, during the weekend. Part of this force was reported

British, 2 U. S. Ships Hit; Sailor Gives Life To Avert Explosion

By William S. Milligan
United Press Staff Writer

Miami, May 11.—A United States naval vessel fired several rounds at two Axis submarines which torpedoed one American merchant vessel while a Cincinnati seaman aboard a second ship saved his fellow crewmen from almost certain death by his bravery, survivors of the two ships said today.

The survivors were landed at Miami, Fort Lauderdale and Palm Beach. Earlier the Navy announced the torpedoing of a British merchantman, survivors of which were landed at Palm Beach where hundreds of persons lined the beach looking on as the crewmen were landed.

Witness Tells of Seeing Periscope

Arthur Forshay, construction worker on the shore, said he definitely saw the periscope of the sub which attacked the British ship.

"It looked like a stovepipe moving out to sea," he said.

He estimated that the U-boat was only about 300 yards from the beach when she fired the torpedo.

Two of the British crew were lost, apparently killed when the torpedo struck the engine room. They were identified only as Latimer and Grubb.

Capt. H. K. Johnsen, of Miami, who from a lifeboat watched the Navy vessel's counterattack in the other torpedoings, said "it was a beautiful sight to see the precision and speed with which the Navy went into action."

"Plain Suicide"

Survivors believed the appearance of the Navy ship moments after the torpedoing saved them from being machine-gunned by two Axis raiders which had made the attack simultaneously.

The Cincinnati hero was Third Assistant Engineer P. Shera, who went down with the other ship after he had successfully turned off the engines of his ship which was ripped by two torpedoes.

The torpedoings were the ninth, tenth and eleventh to be announced

U. S. Airman Tells of Scraping Masts to Smash Foe in Coral Sea

By Pat Robinson
International News Service Staff Writer

An Advanced United Nations Base in the Southwest Pacific, May 11.—Courageous American pilots nearly scraping the masts of Japanese warships to press home their attacks with bombs and torpedoes . . . an enemy aircraft carrier sinking within 10 minutes like a red ball of fire . . . towering geysers shooting up from the water amid an inferno of gunfire and explosions.

Dive Bombers Praised

Giving eyewitness details of the engagement, Elliott told of American fliers braving point-blank antiaircraft fire to lunge down on ships of the enemy flotilla as American naval surface units began hammering at the foe with their guns. He told of dizzy aerial combats waged high above the scene of the battle which he described as "an awesome, glorious sight."

The Army fliers and the men of the Navy worked like a team in scoring the smashing victory over the Japanese armada. Army planes first found the armada trying to sneak south and Army bombers took part in the grand assault when it was at its height.

"Sea Was an Inferno"

"Our dive bombers did remarkable work," Elliott said. "I watched them coming in mast-high, despite a rain of ack-ack (antiaircraft shelling) and machine gun fire, and pressing home their attacks with bombs and aerial torpedoes.

"I saw them get one Jap aircraft carrier which sank in flames within ten minutes.

"I also saw our boys shooting down attacking enemy planes, one of them especially being hit from the side as our pilot outmaneuvered the Jap, giving his gunner a clean shot at the enemy.

"The sea was an inferno.

Tells of Getting Jap Plane

Dynamite Wrecks Transmitter

Saboteurs Silence Paris Radio, Key Nazi Propaganda Station

By the Associated Press

Saboteurs have wrecked Radio Paris, the key broadcasting station for Nazi propaganda in Occupied France, and the station is silent for the first time since the Germans marched into Paris nearly two years ago, the London Daily Mail reported in a dispatch from the French frontier today.

"The giant masts and pylons at Bourges, 130 miles south of Paris, were destroyed by a gigantic dynamite explosion Saturday," the dispatch said.

"Reports reaching here from Bourges declared the damage will take weeks to repair. Masts, pylons and aerials were shattered and twisted. Transmitting and relaying machinery was wrecked.

[The falling towers disrupted short wave transmission facilities for Radio Mondial and Radio Coloniale, the United Press reported.]

The Paris radio had not been heard in London for two days.

Reports of the wrecking were received at the same time as private advices from the continent that the famous old Paris restaurant, Marguery, on the Boulevard Bonne-Nouvelle, had been dynamited.

Several were reported killed in the Marguery, but the extent of the damage was not known.

Meanwhile, it was reported that 20 hostages had been shot near Rouen because of the killing of five German sailors. Five also were shot at St. Auben, 50 others were condemned to be executed if the killers of the Germans are not found by midnight, and 500 more were

Russians Stubbornly Resist Heavy Nazi Offensive to Regain Kerch Peninsula

By the Associated Press

Moscow, May 11. — Heavy fighting has erupted in the Kerch Peninsula, narrow neck leading from the eastern Crimea toward the oil of the Caucasus, and the Red Army is fighting stubbornly there against a new German offensive, the Russians announced officially tonight.

The renewed fighting in the Kerch Peninsula ended the comparative quiet which has prevailed there since the Russians last December hurled the Germans back from the town of Kerch, on the western side of the narrow strait of the same name which connects the Black Sea and the Sea of Azov.

After Hitler's winter campaign fizzled the Russians took the offensive and pushed the Germans back some 30 miles from Kerch and recaptured the Crimean Port of Feodosiya, but later were forced to abandon the latter.

38 Nazi Planes Destroyed

The communique listed 38 German planes destroyed Sunday to 12 Soviet losses.

With this bag, the Russians said German losses since May 3 totaled 209 planes to 98 Russian.

[In one sector of the Kalinin Front, the Germans attempted to penetrate the Russian lines, but were repulsed by the counterblows of Russian infantry and artillery, said a communique quoted by the United Press. A single Russian unit killed nearly 1300 Germans and captured much valuable booty.

[A Russian detachment fighting on the central front was credited with capturing five German guns, several trench mortars, many rifles and other equipment.]

101 Axis Planes Knocked Out Over Malta in 72 Hours

Valletta, Malta, May 11 (U.P.).—Tremendously reinforced British air fighters, together with antiaircraft batteries, have destroyed or damaged 101 Axis planes over Malta during the last 72 hours, 63 of them, a record bag, in one day, it was announced tonight.

American pilots also took part in the fighting, 17 graduated American Eaglets having just been assigned to Malta.

The R. A. F. score for Sunday added up as follows: Twelve bombers and four fighters destroyed, 11 bombers and 9 fighters probably destroyed, 11 bombers and 10 fighters damaged, all accounted for by the Spitfires and making, with the addition of 6 planes brought down by the Ack-Ack, a grand total of 61.

An R. A. F. communique issued at Cairo said only six British planes were missing from operations throughout the Mediterranean theater, which included a bombing attack on Bengasi in Libya as well as the Malta fighting.

[One Malta official said the island's present strong defenses "make it simply murder for the Axis airmen" tot continue the assault, the Associated Press reported. He expressed hope this would force the Germans and Italians to call off their long siege. Lord Gort, who was sworn in yesterday as Governor and Commander-in-Chief of Malta, today congratulated the R. A. F. and ground artillery for their weekend successes.]

India Army Grouped To Meet Invasion

Visiting D. C.

Cripps' Aide Views India Confidently

A fairly optimistic view of India where "a million men, 52 per cent of them Hindus," are under arms and surrounded by a native population prepared to hold, in effect, "a sit-down strike" against invaders, was offered here yesterday by Graham Spry, personal assistant to Sir Stafford Cripps during the recent British-Indian conferences.

The term "sit-down strike" was used by Spry in defining the Indians' policy of nonviolent resistance decided upon following the Cripps conference stalemate. Such an attitude, he said during a conference at the British Press Service officers, certainly would impede the Japanese.

Meanwhile, he asserted, the Indian army is being increased as rapidly as arms can be shipped from Britain and the United States. The arms are not being distributed "hither and yon," but to men enlisting for service. There are some 50,000 volunteers a month, a number limited only by supplies. He said the Indians have shown what they can do and are on the job.

He emphasized that Indians have expressed opposition to the Japanese and said this point should be clearly understood.

And despite the stalemate of the conference, he said, it made "a great contribution — nothing but friendliness prevailed at the end." He referred to informal parties held by the delegates and said the Indian press did "a magnificent job."

Spry said the immediate problem is one of defense of India. He termed the conference simply "a political stalemate." He implied that the next move is up to India.

Asked if he thought the political question was dead for the war's duration, he replied that "the Indian question is never dead." The conference stalemate, he declared, had no affect on the army.

He said he didn't see how the "British proposals could have gone any further," and that he did not believe Cripps' "sincerity" was challenged in any quarter.

Spry has been in the United States since April 23. He praised the American news correspondents on their coverage of the Cripps conferences.

Wavell Puts Bulk Of Forces on South, Northeast Coasts

By the Associated Press

New Delhi, India, May 11.—Britain's commander in India, Gen. Sir Archibald P. Wavell, was disclosed tonight to have reorganized the three Indian military commands into powerful and competent mobile armies to meet land or sea attack fro mthe Japanese on eastern or southern India.

With the Japanese still reported marshalling a Bengal invasion fleet at Rangoon, and with only the gallant but exhausted force of Gen. Harold Alexander in the Chindwin Valley of northwest Burma between the enemy and the northern gate to India, Wavell upset the 100-year-old Indian military policy by which the strongest imperial forces were held on the northwest frontier.

His primary purpose was, however, to divorce the administrative functions of the army from the fighting units so that the defense along the coast and the eastern and northern frontiers would become the sole function of the fighting forces.

Three army commands were created—northeast, south and northwest. The vast central area will be administered under the central India commanw, whose major function will be to train new defense forces.

Most of the trained British and Indian troops are now expected to be concentrated in the armies of the northeast and south. No change in command was involved.

moving east toward Lashio.

Other Chinese troops, still holding out in the area south of Lashio and Mandalay, were reported to have repelled three Japanese attacks on Kongum on the Salween River in eastern Burma between May 5 and 8, killing 200 of the enemy.

A British communique from New Delhi said that British Blenheim bombers raided Japanese-held Magwe on the Irrawaddy in western Burma for the second straight day, hitting runways and damaging a Japanese fighter that tried to intercept them.

The Japs, stringing out their communication lines from end to end of Burma, captured Myitkyina, 185 miles north of Lashio, last Friday, it was announced today. They also sent aerial advance guards into India, to bomb the port of Chittagong and Imphal, 40 miles inside India.

A New Delhi communique said the "small town' of Imphal suffered "moderate casualties" among military and administrative personnel, and "slight' damage in a bombing today.

New Drive Expected

Chungking, May 11 (AP).—General Lung Yun, Governor of Yunnan Province, said in a statement today that the situation was developing in China's favor, but warned of the possibility the Japanese might attempt to drive on Kunming.

"If the Japanese risk such an adventure," he said, "they will encounter stout resistance from several hundred thousand Chinese troops in Yunnan who are firmly resolved to drive the invader out."

Today's official Chinese bulletin acknowledged for the first time that Bhamo, alternate terminal of the Burma Road 170 miles northwest of Mandalay, and Myitkyina, 250 miles north of Mandalay, had fallen to advanced Japanese detachments, but in view of the Japanese reverse in China proper these quick conquests were by no means secure.

Deep in China, in the border areas of western Shantung and southern Hopen Provinces, a seven-day Japanese offensive which the enemy termed "mopping up operations," was said by the Chinese to have resulted in a general defeat by 20,000 Japanese troops.

At the end of this week of battle the Japanese shipped back from the front 40 truckloads of bodies and burned many others near the Hopeh border, Chinese dispatches said.

by the Navy in the last seven days from which survivors have been landed at Florida ports.

Live steam escaping from cracked pipes made rescue of Shera impossible, Ted Peace of Middlesboro, Ky., one of the 44 survivors landed at Fort Lauderdale and Miami from one of the ships related.

Had the engines continued to run at full speed, he said, the ship's boilers probably would have exploded before they could launch lifeboats. If such occurred, the loss of life would have been heavy.

"It was just plain suicide to try going in there," Peace said. "I could hear Shera screaming. It was awful."

Johnsen, who was among the Palm Beach survivors, said he tried to make his way to the officers' quarters to save the crew's payroll and the ship's papers, but the "fumes from the gasoline knee-deep in the cabins were too much for me."

All 32 of Johnsen's crew were saved and only two injured. The torpedoing occurred off the lower Atlantic Coast early Wednesday. Three men were believed lost from the other boat, including Shera. Chief Engineer A. Feutress, address unknown, died from a skull injury and a seaman known as "Kelly" was last seen jumping overboard immediately following the attack.

British Ship Hit Near Shore

George W. Boynton, aboard a small fishing boat, told at Palm Beach earlier of witnessing the torpedoing of the British ship.

"I saw her shudder from the impact of the explosion," he said. "She practically blew up in front of my eyes. I thought she had struck a floating mine as I didn't think a submarine would come in that close to shore. We were only about a mile and a half from the beach."

Boynton's boat and other fishing vessels towed the ill-fated British vessel in close to shore where she was later taken over by the Navy.

With its outskirts still under German artillery fire and its admiralty building in spy glass view of the German lines, the city reported that other air and ground activities of the Germans indicated they may be turning their attention to a new attempt to reduce the city.

Moscow reports said snow flurries, apparently the last of the season, had been experienced on the northern front, but west of Moscow Russian Guardists paraded on the Mozhaisk highway in a warm spring sun. Further south, in the Ukraine, the ground was reported already dry.

Northwest of Moscow, the Germans were said to have been driven from a strategic hill by aerial bombing followed by infantry assault.

The Germans lost 400 men, four guns and four radio transmitters in another action on the same front when they were frustrated in an attempt to penetrate behind Soviet lines.

Guerillas west of Moscow were credited with the wrecking of two trains which cost the Germans 1000 military dead.

Laval Says He'll Outlaw Deal Between Martinique and U. S.

By Ralph Heinzen
United Press Staff Writer

Vichy, May 11.—Pierre Laval, chief of government, has let the United States know that Vichy will outlaw any arrangements between the United States Government and French colonial possessions in the Caribbean which the home government has not expressly authorized, it was learned today.

(The Berlin radio, heard in New York, broadcast a Vichy dispatch claiming that the United States had demanded a lease on strategically important points on Martinque, disarmament of French naval units and surrender of French tankers stationed there.)

Laval drove to Moulins, on the border between occupied and unoccupied France, today to confer with high personalities of the German Embassy in Paris, after an earlier talk with Takanobu Mitani, new Japanese Ambassador to Vichy. United States "demands" on Martinique and British occupation of part of Madagascar were discussed in both conferences.

May Meet Goering

When an official communique announced tonight that Marshal Petain had hastily left his Riviera estate and would reach Vichy by special train at 10 a. m, tomorrow, informed quarters believed that Laval had arranged at Moulins for an early meeting of himself and Petain with Reichs Marshal Hermann Goering for examination of the general Franco-German situation.

In addition to the French colonial situation, they said, the agenda probably would include Vichy's desire for German pressure on Spain and Italy to make them moderate their territorial claims against France.

Paris Press Bitter

In a bitter editorial typical of many which appeared in occupied France today, Stephane Lauzanne, veteran editor of the Paris Matin, wrote of "America's cynical hypocrisy" in seeking to alter the status quo at Martinique. Charging that Washington wants to seize French tankers in the island's waters, he said Anglo-American tactics are to "make France pay for losses caused by Germany and take from France what the Allies have been obliged to surrender elsewhere."

Twelve thousand persons, led by the prefect, demonstrated at Nimes today in continued manifestations of anger at Britain's seizure of the Diego Suarez area of Madagascar. Members of the French Legion at Lons le Saunier, in the Jura, volunteered to take part in any action ordered by the government in reprisal for the British move.

Besides his conferences with the Germans and the Japanese Ambassador, Laval also met today with Admiral Darlan, supreme commander of all French armed forces, Vice Admiral Paul Auphan, navy secretary, and naval technicians, with the Martinique situation believed the main topic. Some attention may also have been given to Madagascar, where latest reports said the British had dug trenches south of the occupied Diego Suarez Naval Base area.

Fate of Ships Believed Topic

Informed sources suggested the fate of the three French naval vessels in Martinique waters—the aircraft carrier Bearn and the cruisers Emile Bertin and Jeanne D'Arc—was discussed.

According to British precedent, these warships could be confiscated by the United States, along with tankers and merchant ships, but it was said here that Vichy would protest such action vigorously. It was pointed out, however, that the London radio recently claimed that France had allowed Japan to charter numerous French bottoms in Indo-China to transport rice to Japan.

In meeting with American Charge d'Affaires S. Pinckney Tuck yesterday, it was understood, Laval objected strongly to the presentation of "demands" by Rear Admiral John H. Hoover, commander of the United States Caribbean Sea front, to Admiral Georges Robert, French high commissioner for Martinique, Guadeloupe and French Guiana.

There already was a perfectly satisfactory agreement between the United States and the colonial administration, he maintained, but if there were need to change it the negotiations should be directly between Vichy and Washington.

Anti-British demonstrations because of the occupation of Diego Suarez were held also at Dakar, French West Africa, and Casablanca, French Morocco.

Detailed reports from Tananarive, Madagascar, of the Diego Suarez operations said that there was very little property destruction in the British attack and that civilian victims were few.

Air Losses Heavy

French air forces had proportionately heavy losses, with 14 known dead or missing and two in a hospital with injuries.

French civil servants were allowed to remain at their posts to continue normal administration of the Diego Suarez area. Stores were open again, the reports said, but industrial enterprises still were shut down.

French army, naval and air force officers were interned aboard British warships, but French white noncommissioned officers and troops were in camps ashore. Native troops were demobilized and allowed liberty.

It was considered not unlikely that the officers would be taken to the African mainland for continued interment.

Before the surrender of the naval base at Diego Suarez, the French endeavored to render aviatiton facilities useless. Gasoline stores were set afire and destroyed in their entirety. Air installations at Tananarive also were blown up.

from Puerto Rico, and immediately presented the American proposals to the French commissioner, Admiral Georges Robert. Admiral Hoover returned to Puerto Rico Sunday, apparently to communicate with the State Department, and is believed to have returned to Martinique late yesterday.

Unique Status for Islands

The contemplated arrangement, under which the French possessions will come under American protection for the duration of the war, but with the flag of the French republic still flying as a symbol of the sovereignty of the French people, would give the islands a unique status. Admiral Robert, as the ultimate governing authority, would be independent of the Petain-Laval regime, but has not been asked to associate himself with the Free French cause of Gen. Charles De Gaulle. He would, however, undertake, with the cooperation of the United States, to keep the Axis from gaining any foothold in Martinique or Guadeloupe; and thus one of the last remaining breaches in the defenses of the Western Hemisphere would be closed.

Among the objectives of the United States in the negotiations is an agreement by Admiral Robert to dismantle and immobilize the warships which are under his control. These include the aircraft carrier Bearn, the cruiser Emile Bertin, and the auxiliary cruiser Barfleur. Also in Martinique are approximately 200 American-made warplanes, which were taken there in the Bearn after the fall of France. It is possible that these planes (presumably greatly deteriorated) may again come into the possession of the United States, along with any French merchant ships at present docked in the islands.

Through Admiral Hoover, President Roosevelt has promised, in the event of a mutually satisfactory arrangement being reached, to safeguard French interests and assets in the caribbean for the ultimate uses of the French people. Among these assets is a huge store of gold, about 250 million dollars worth, which was saved from the wreck of France, and taken to Martinique by the cruiser Emile Bertin.

Gas Warfare Favors Allies, Observers Say

By the Associated Press

London, May 11.—Competent military observers said tonight the scales were heavily weighted in favor of Britain and her Allies if Germany tried to break the Russian deadlock with poison gas in the face of Winston Churchill's assurance that the R. A. F. would retaliate with the same weapon against the Third Reich.

Britain, these experts said, has the air power to launch a gas offensive which would cripple communications, drive industrial workeers from factories and possibly strike a damaging blow at German morale.

Dispersal of gas from planes flying at 27,000 feet is "perfectly feasible," they added, and they pointed out that within the last month, four-motored R. A. F. bombers have been able to bomb targets on the German Baltic coast, in Czecho-Slovakia and in Italy.

Precautions against German gas warfare—which caused 180,983 British front-line casualaties in the first World War—have constituted a cardinal point of British war strategy since this conflict began.

Planes Can Spray Gas

Laboratories, training schools and industries have been storing gas and investigating new means of dispersal. Antigas measures, involving gas masks for all civilians and extensively equipped decontamination squads and shelters, date back to Munich days.

Any liquid gas can be sprayed from the air by replacing the bomb packs of Britain's big airecraft with tanks of the chemical. Ejected at an altitude of several miles, the gas would reach the ground in a fine mist. This, say experts, could immobilize entire sections of such factory towns as Stuttgart, paralyze naval shore installations like those at Kiel and close railroad centers and roads for many hours.

Small bombs also might be filled with choking gas.

Despite the immediate danger of reprisal, some military observers believe, however, that the temptation to the Germans to use gas in Russia is growing.

The German army is engaged in positional warfare on most fronts and the areas through which it hopes to drive this year are studded with strong points which vary in size from a small village to a large fortified area.

Different Situation in Russia.

In Poland, Flanders and France, the Germans moved around these areas and reduced them at leisure. Against Russia they found this impossible. Hence their need to neutralize these positions and check counterattacks.

Gas would be a cheaper and easier method of overcoming these points than assault by armored and infantry divisions. Latest figures show there is one gas battalion per corps in the German army and some German tanks are equipped for the emission of gas.

(The German radio said Prime Minister Churchill's Sunday speech and its threat of R. A. F. gas reprisals against military objectives in Germany if the Germans use gas in Russia, was not mentioned in the German press, but for outside consumption Berlin broadcasts reiterated Hitler's "assurances" that Germany would not use gas until it was employed by Germany's enemies.

(Official Russian dispatches last Saturday reported the experimental use of German gas mines on the Crimean front.)

U. S. Prepared To Use Gas If Axis Does

By Philip G. Reed
International News Service Staff Writer

Military officials last night reported that American forces are thoroughly prepared to strike back with poison gas should the Axis resort to that mode of warfare.

The United States Army Chemical Warfare Service quietly has prepared for the time when the enemy may decide to unloose gas against our battle forces and the country's civilian population.

There was no public comment on Prime Minister Churchill's warning or on reports that the Nazis had started using poison gas in Russia, but Army spokesmen indicated that the United States is well prepared offensively and defensively for gas operations.

Retaliation Best Defense

Maj. Gen. William N. Porter, head of the Chemical Warfare Service, recently asserted that "it is fully realized by all that the best insurance against such an attack lies not only in gas masks and protective clothing but in the ability to retaliate immediately."

America's 55 million civilians residing in the probable "target" area—a zone 300 miles inland from the Atlantic, Gulf and Pacific coasts—will be the first to receive gas masks if the Office of Civilian Defense and the Army decide such a protective measure is necessary.

The Army already has been developing a gas mask for civilian use and is directed to develop production facilities capable of producing 2,500,000 masks each month. OCD recently allocated 19 million dollars for this project.

Initially, five million masks will be distributed to air raid wardens, decontamination squads and other civilian workers.

Preparations Under Way

In New York, Col. Walter W. Metcalf, acting director of the Second Defense Area, said that "all sorts of preparations have been made about the question of supplying gas masks to civilians."

Should the OCD decide to distribute gas masks to the civilian population, allocation will be made to communities on the basis of their vulnerability to attack and their importance to the war effort.

American Army officials long have felt that the dictator nations would employ gas if they felt it would serve their best interests.

General Porter said that "this war will never be really 'all out' until gases once more flood the battle fields."

Use of poison gas is outlawed by international agreement reached at Geneva, and most nations, including Germany and Britain, are signatories. The United States, Japan, Brazil and Argentina are among the few exceptions.

According to General Porter, the United States Senate refused to consent to American participation in such a treaty.

"After full consideration of the facts, the Senate refused to tie the hands in war of the greatest scientific and industrial nation of the world," he explained.

"It must be remembered, however, that treaty exists to prevent the Axis from ever, that not even the fiction of a military forces. Safety lies only in powers from using gas against our the best defensive measures coupled with the ability to retaliate to such an extent as to be overwhelming."

Army Reshuffles Forces Here To Strengthen Air Defenses

The Army has reorganized its military forces in and around the nation's Capital to strengthen the city's air defenses, it was officially disclosed yesterday.

A War Department announcement said that the old Washington Provisional Brigade, which has been charged with the defense of the District of Columbia for years, has been abolished and that a new command—the Military District of Washington—has been created.

While officials would not define its geographical area or discuss the Army units involved, it is understood that the reorganization is designed to greatly strengthen the city's defenses, especially against aerial attack.

On Saturday, Brig. Gen. John T. Lewis, one of the Army's outstanding antiaircraft experts, was named commander of the Washington Provisional Brigade, succeeding Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, District National Guard commander.

Lewis becomes commander of the new "Military District of Washington," which is a part of the Eastern Defense Command, set up under Lieut. Gen. Hugh A. Drum some weeks ago.

The old Washington brigade at one time was directly under the War Department and, later, a unit of the Third Corps Area, which has headquarters in Baltimore and embraces the District, Maryland, Virginia and Pennsylvania.

Yesterday's announcent said that the headquarters company of the provisional brigade had been redesignated as "Headquarteres Company, Military District of Washington."

For years the fighting components of the brigade were the Twelfth Infantry and the Third Cavalry, both of which have been transferred from Washington in recent months. The combat units of the new command are understood to include a considerable number of anti-aircraft as well as infantry troops.

"The sky seemed full of planes—whirling, diving, fighting."

Elliott was the navigator of a bomber skippered by Lieut. Arnold "Skid" Johnson of New York. This bomber shot down a Japanese seaplane 100 miles from the nearest land point. The seaplane's pilot bailed out, but was drowned.

"A blast from our turret gunner got the Jap's rear gunner who slumped forward, while the plane burst into flames," Elliott related.

"The pilot then had the choice of remaining in his plane and being fried alive or of gambling on bailing out with about one chance in ten million of being rescued. He jumped while the plane went down. He sank immediately."

Navy Lists 907 Hurt At Pearl Harbor

Six Are From District and Vicinity, Six From Maryland, Nine From Virginia

The names of a District officer and five enlisted men from the Washington area were among the total of 907 listed by the Navy Department yesterday as wounded since the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor.

MOORE

They are: Capt. Roy Robinson, 31, United States Marine Corps, of 909 Kent Place Northeast.

Robert Konold Meyers, seaman, second class, of 1310 Saratoga Avenue Northeast, whose family has moved from Washington.

Andrew J. Paszkiewicz, 42, technical sergeant, United States Marine Corps, of 2100 Nineteenth Street Northwest.

Joseph D. Hoffman, chief radioman, of 4119 Thirty-second Street, Mount Ranier.

John A. Ford, jr., 21, seaman, first class, United States Coast Guard, of 1610 North Greenbrier Street, Arlington.

Grover C. Moore, jr., 23, seaman, first class, of Quantico, Va.

Also listed by the Navy Department as wounded was Ensign Joseph K. Taussig, jr., 21, son of Vice Admiral Joseph K. Taussig, retired, of Norfolk, Va., and a former District resident.

The roll of wounded also included the six Maryland men and nine Virginia men.

The Maryland List

The Maryland men, all in the Navy, are:

Ensign Charles F. Willis, jr., United States Naval Reserve; Felix Vladimir Balodis, first class seaman; Robert Edward Dombrowski, third class shipfitter; Walter Joyner, second class fireman, all of Baltimore;

PASZKIEWICZ TAUSSIG

Thomas Redmond Morris, third class gunner's mate, of Centerville, and William David Nichols, chief pharmacist's mate, of Oxford.

Worked Up From Ranks

Capt. Robinton has received the Purple Heart award for wounds suffered in action on Bataan Peninsula. His wife lives at 909 Kent Place Northeast.

Starting his career with the Marines as an enlisted man, Capt. Robinton worked up through the ranks until to a captaincy, to which he was appointed in December, 1941. He enlisted in 1932 and was promoted to second lieutenant in 1936.

At the University of Alabama, where he was graduated, he was a member of Phi Sigma Delta and played first violin in the college orchestra. He is a native of Mobile, Ala., where he attended elementary and high schools.

Ensign Taussig received his injuries during the Pearl Harbor attack and was given the coveted Navy Cross for sticking to his post although hit by Japanese fire.

According to the last official report sent by the Navy to his father at Norfolk, on December 17, Taussig was "recovering nicely."

A Family Coincidence

Taussig's injury — a compound fracture of the left thigh bone—made a strange family parallel. The elder Taussig received a similar wound 42 years ago in the Boxer Rebellion in China. Also a coincidence is the fact that both father and son were graduated ahead of time from the Naval Academy, the admiral because of the outbreak of war with Spain, and the ensign because of the defense program.

Ensign Taussig was born on May 28, 1920 at Newport, R. I. He attended Western High School in Washington and Rutherford Preparatory School in Long Beach, Calif. At Annapolis, where he was graduated in February, 1911, he participated in wrestling, rifle, battalion football, and plebe soccer.

Sergeant Paszkiewicz was wounded in both arms and legs in the Japanese attack on Wake Island, December 8, and was reported captured February 19. His wife lives at 2100 Nineteenth Street Northwest.

Sergeant Paszkiewicz was born November 14, 1899, at St. Joseph, Mich. After one enlistment in the Army he joined the Marine Corps when he was 23 and was graduated in 1926 from the Free and Kite Balloon School, Lakehurst, N. J. He was captain of the Quantico Marine baseball team four years ago. He was given a citation for bravery on Wake Island.

Hoffman, a native of Mount Rainier, Md., was wounded in action in the West Pacific, but no details were available as to how or where his wonds were inflicted.

Son of a War Veteran

He is the son of John P. Hoffman, who served with the Navy during the Spanish-American War.

Hoffman was born in 1903 and has been in the Navy 23 years. He attended Hyattsville High School and served in Washington at the Navy Department and at the Bellevue Naval Radio Station before his assignment to sea duty. His sister, Mrs. Dorothy Sloan, lives at 4407 Thirty-second Street, Mount Rainier.

Ford was the only Coast Guard casualty from the Washington area. A resident of Arlington since 1929, he was born in Jacksonville, Fla. He was graduated from James Monroe Elementary School and attended Washington and Lee High School, where he was on the football and track teams.

He enlisted in the Coast Guard when he was 19.

Moore was wounded at Pearl Harbor, where he was attached to a destroyer. Aboard the same ship was a brother, Albert T. Moore.

Moore was born in Easley, S. C., on December 29, 1918, and attended elementary schools in Stafford County, Va., and at Quantico, where his parents are living with another son, Charles E., 17. His father works for the police department at the Quantico Marine Base.

Rare Shots Made as Captive Jap Pilot Is Lured Before Camera

An Advanced Allied Base, Australia, May 11 (AP).—Four Australian newsmen and American newsreel photographer Earle Crotchett arrived here today on a ship that came through the Coral Sea while part of the big naval and air battle was going on.

They didn't get anywhere close to the battle but Crotchett got a rare piece of film—320 feet of unposed action by a Japanese airman, a prisoner aboard ship. For that matter, Japanese prisoners themselves are a rarity in these parts.

Sergt. Roger McNamara, 23, of Millville, Mass., was given credit for capturing this one, a 25-year-old pilot whose plane was downed north of Port Moresby.

Crotchett said the prisoner was affable enough but shied at posing because he was afraid the pictures might get back to Toko where his wife and young daughter live—and what might happen if it became known he was taken prisoner. As a rule, Japanese don't carry parachutes.

Crotchett rigged up a blanket over a cabin door and stood behind it with his camera, grinding away as his buddies paraded the prisoner up and down the deck, smoking, laughing and bowing.

"He was pretty much upset when he learned he'd been photographed," Crotchett said.

'Flying Otaris' Do Bit

Sarasota, Fla., May 11 (AP).—"The Flying Otarsis" have disbanded their famous aerial act for the duration to devote their efforts to winning the war. They have been star performers of the Ringling Circus for a number of years.

Four ofthe Otaris—whose last name in private life is Mataush—have answered the call to the colors. They are Constantine, Alfred, Bill and George. Another son, Frank, an expert machinist, has applied for war industry work.

The father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Florenz Mataush, a daughter, Nin, and Frank will report to Federal Court in Tampa Tuesday for their final citizenship examination. They applied for their first papers five years ago. Born in Russia, the Mataushes have thrilled circus audiences in Europe and America.

Quisling Party Split

London, May 11 (AP).—Reuters dispatches from Stockholm today reported a split within the ranks of Premier V idkun Quisling's Norwegian-Nazi Uarty, as a result of which several district leaders were said to have been deposed and sent to concentration camps.

The party organization was said to have undergone a thorough purge in the Rogaland, Stavanger and Haughesund districts.

Army in Cupid Role

Belfast, May 11 (AP).—The United States Army inadvertently played the role of Cupid when it ordered Lieut. J. W. Haywood-Harman, 27, of Newport, R. I., to duty in northern Ireland—for the officer and Dr. Attracta Machale of Monkstown, County Dublin, were married here today.

They met nine years ago while studying medicine at University College, Dublin. Dr. Machale became assistant school medical officer in Birmingham, England, and Haywood-Harman returned home. The Army brought him back to Ireland.

Jap Loss of Life In Coral Sea Believed Great

By the Associated Press

Allied Headquarters, Australia, May 11.—The possibility that Japanese invasion troops perished by the shipload in the Coral Sea battle was advanced today by competent informants who emphasized that Allied announcements of enemy losses thus far have made little mention of damage to transport units known to have been part of the enemy force.

Conservative and still incomplete reports of the epic battle have listed only two Japanese transports or supply ships sunk and two more damaged but these observers said that when the full score is tabulated it may include a greater number of Japanese troop carriers.

The officially announced number of Japanese ships sunk or badly damaged in waters northeast of Australia in the last seven days stood at 21. A communique from General MacArthur's headquarters early today added two submarines sunk or damaged to the previously announced 19, but these figured in an action separate from the Coral Sea engagement.

United States and Australian ships and planes continued on the alert for additional signs of the enemy, although there was no true indication that he had reformed his forces for another test of Allied fire and steel.

(The Naxi-controlled Paris radio broadcast a report that powerful Japanese naval forces had arrived in the Coral Sea for resumption of the battle, but confirmation was lacking.)

While the uneasy lull existed a solemn warning came from Sir Keith Murdoch, one of Australia's leading editors, against over-optimism at what the Allies have achieved to date.

"It is sheer folly to say that we have smashed an invasion fleet," he said, reflecting the same note of caution expressed by General MacArthur himself.

"The naval and air engagement in the Coral Sea was against a comparatively light Japanese force, not against the main Japanese fleet.

"What must be realized is that a large Japanese expedition is beginning.

"Three things come clearly out of the Coral Sea engagement:

1. The Japanese have a big movement of troops on hand. 2. We have had losses, which, although less than the enemy's, are more difficult than his to replace immediately. 3. We need rapid and great reinforcements in both planes and ships."

General MacArthur conferred again today with Prime Minister John Curtin for the second time in two days and Gen. Sir Thomas Blamey discussed the general war outlook and the implications of the Coral Sea battle with Army Minister Francis Fprde.

Air Corps Gives 500 Nonflying Commissions

Miami Beach, Fla., May 11 (AP).—The Army Air Corps today gave commisisons as second lieutenants to 500 picked enlisted men—the first graduates from its only nonflying officer candidate school.

In 10 weeks of intensive work in the colorful setting of this swank winter resort, the men completed a three months' course of military and academic study and body-building calisthenics and athletics.

Bars Turned Into Classrooms

For classrooms, they used the lounges or one-time bars of fashionable oceanfront hotels, or sat beneath palm trees on lawns, in parks or on the beach itself. They bunked in double-decker beds in once-expensive suites in the hotels. They ate cafeteria style in expensive restaurants that had been stripped of all unserviceable displays.

The men were commissioned today by Maj. Gen. Walter R. Weaver, commanding general of the Air Corps Technical Training Command, and now are ready for immediate assignent. They are the men who handle supply, intelligence and other administrative services for the men who actually fly the Nation's bombers and fighters.

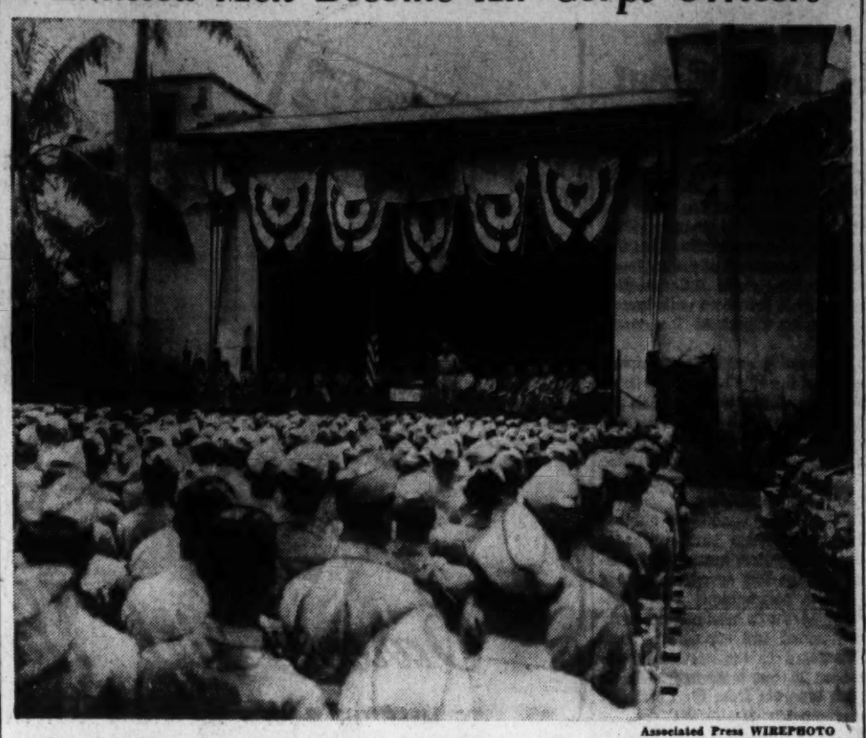
Soldier Intelligence Hailed

General Weaver in a graduating address in palm-fringed Flamingo Park told the new officers that the enlisted man is a cross-section of the Nation.

"American soldiers," he said, "are neither ignorant nor stupid. Generally speaking, they are intelligent men and, in comparison with many other armies of the world, are mentally superior. They are men of understanding and of feeling and it is, therefore, your duty to deal with them as such, not as children or as illiterates."

A second class, of 1000 men, is to graduate from the school in about six weeks.

Enlisted Men Become Air Corps Officers



Associated Press WIREPHOTO

THEY'LL TAKE PART IN AN ALLIED VICTORY, said Maj. Gen. Walter R. Weaver, chief of the training program, of 500 picked enlisted men who were commissioned second lieutenants yesterday in the Army Air Corps. They had completed a 10-week military course at Miami Beach, Fla.

Our New Army; Air Mechanics In Training

work, sleep and rest in three shifts; instructors the same; cooks and KP's in the great 2000-man mess halls feed them in three shifts, nine meals a day, in a never-ceasing round of cooking, eating and dishwashing.

Nine times a day the cantonment area swarms with men marching from classrooms to mess halls, under their arms the brown paper portfolios the Army issues them to carry their homework. Three times a day the area swarms with even longer lines and more of them as one shift moves back to barracks and the next takes its place. There is no waiting for anything, no pausing by the way; everything and everybody moves on a time schedule geared to the Nation's need.

Cantonment Still Growing

As barracks were finished here, men moved into them and then more men came in and were housed in tents. The cantonment grew and the tent cities grew and both still are growing to take care of the counting tide of men who will flow through Keesler Field to learn to keep 'em flying.

Where does the Army get men to learn the delicate and exacting trade of aircraft mechanic, to tend the extremely complicated sum of body, engines and instruments which make up the modern airplane? It gets them from the source of victory in every war, from the manhood of America.

It reaches down and brings them in from homes and shops and schools and stores, young men who may never have given a thought to or shown one hour's interest in mechanical things, and makes aircraft mechanics of them in 110 days of intensive training.

A random glance through a handful of their classification cards tells you who they are. There you find a man who was a ferryboat deckhand a few weeks ago, a restaurant counterman, a beauty shop operator, a caterer, a longshoreman, a bank teller, a waiter, a bell captain, a policeman, a zipper inspector, a bartender, a florist. These are the men on whom victory in the air will depend, men you rub elbows with every day, the great middle class of America.

Some Don't Like the Idea

Some of them may not like the idea of becoming aircraft mechanics when they find themselves assigned to school here. This work is so foreign to anything in their previous experience they don't like it. One of them, an auditor and certified public accountant in civil life, asked to be reclassified and his request was rejected with a statement of policy which comes as near as anything to being a nutshell diagram of how this war will be won:

"The number of technicians required to fill the needs of the Air Forces today is such that out of necessity we must make our selection in many cases without regard to the individual's personal desires or previous experience, but only as to his proficiency and aptitude for learning and training . . . we ask the co-operation of all squadron commanders to impress on those of their command that any and all assignments are equally important toward the final objective."

The number of men qualified by civilian training and occupation to keep the Army's airplanes in action is an infinitesimal proportion of the thousands who pass through reception centers after being drafted. Automobile mechanics among them are needed by all the services, fighting and supply. The Air Forces can get but an inconsequential few of them.

So, when the Air Force calls for men for its technical training schools, it gets those with intelligence ratings above a certain minimum, regardless of civilian occupation. They come to Keesler Field and are sent to the Replacement Center for four weeks of learning the basic principles of soldiering and becoming acquainted with the Army rifle.

While they are there each man goes before a trade test board and is examined for his aptitude for the trades the Air Force needs. If he shows a peculiar aptitude for radio or photography or weather forecasting or some specialty other than mechanics, he is sent to some other school. If his aptitude is for mechanics, regardless of what he may have been doing all his life, he goes to school here.

This has proved to be a remarkably accurate system. Losses from failure to pass the mechanics' course have amounted so far to only 5.1 per cent of the number of men admitted. Some of these failures are voluntary, like the surge of failures which followed immediately the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, when men wanted to get out of school and into action.

Once assigned to school here, the student is placed in one of the three shifts and from that time on spends 770 hours in classrooms and shops. His course is divided into 11 phases of 10 days each during which he moves on from the fundamentals of aircraft and engines to actual maintenance of engines and planes on the flying line.

The student at the Technical Training School spends his first 10 days becoming acquainted with airplanes, engines, electrical systems, hydraulic systems, instruments and maintenance paperwork. Then he gets 10 days instruction an airplane structures, 10 days on hydraulic systems and miscellaneous equipment, 10 days on propellers, 10 days on instruments, 10 days on engines, 10 days on electrical systems, 10 days on fuel systems, 10 days on engnie operation and tests and 10 days each on single and multiple engine inspection and maintenance on the flying line.

(In another installment about Keesler Field in tomorrow's Post, Marshall Andrews reveals the difficulties which the Army had to overcome in order to supply the ever-increasing demand for airplane mechanics by the miraculously expanding Air Corps.)

U. S. Won't Let Coughlin Case Languish, Die

Church of the Little Flower in Royal Oak, Mich., turned from his clerical pursuits during the depression and became a radio rabble rouser. His sanctimonious manner and glib tongue won him considerable following but the virulence of his tirades moved his superiors in his church to declare formally that he did not speak for that church in his agitation.

Entered Publishing in 1936

Coughlin went into the publishing business in 1936, setting up the weekly magazine, Social Justice, which was barred from the mails last month after the Attorney General declared it was "clearly seditious" and was making a deliberate attack upon the war effort.

Postmaster General Walker ordered a board to determine whether the magazine should be permanently barred from the mails. By the time this hearing was called, the special grand jury was deep in a probe of the financing and control of the Coughlin magazine, with a dozen employes summoned to Washington.

Coughlin, who had been issuing "challenges" to be called to Washington, averted a Postoffice Department ruling on the sedition question by abruptly subsiding, giving up his mailing privilege without a fight.

The Attorney General suggested yesterday that it was possible to view the Social Justice case as one resembling an antitrust matter.

Question of Public Policy

There have been occasions when the courts believed the public policy was served by entering consent decrees, without criminal prosecution, against industrialists who abandoned practices tending toward monopoly—as Coughlin has abandoned his seditious publication.

On the other hand, Mr. Biddle agreed, that it might be found that the public policy required that any persons guilty of sedition in wartime ought to be punished for it.

The Washington grand jury will resume its Social Justice investigation tomorrow, following a recess in which the special prosecutors—William Power Maloney, Lieut. Edward J. Hickey, jr., U. S. N., and John T. M. Reddan—have analyzed evidence previously brought out before the grand jury.

Called to testify tomorrow are Dr. Walton Cole, BoBston, and Philip Johnson and Edward Kinsky of New York. The New York men were described as former employes of Social Justice.

Calling of these witnesses from the East suggested that the investigators are ready to move on from the operation in Royal Oak to its extensions in other cities.

Williams Asks Indictment As Alient Agent Quashed

Facing trial on charges of criminal conspiracy and violating the Foreign Agents Act as an agent of the JaJpanese Government, Frederick Vincent Williams yesterday asked leave of court to file a motion to quash his indictment.

Williams' attorneys indicated that they wished to contend that Williams did not waive his immunity against self incrimination when he was a witness in grand jury investigations conducted on the West Coast by Special Prosecufors Albert E. Arent and Arthur B. Caldwell.

Consequently, the attorneys indicated, Williams suffered a violation of his constitutional rights when he was indicted in Washington, accused of conspiring with seven other men—five Japanese and two Americans—two of them pleaded guilty to charges of violating the Foreign Agents Act.

Scheduled for trial with Williams is David Warren Ryder, who was indicted on similar charges.

Justice T. Alan Goldsborough was busy with a local criminal matter when the scheduled trial time came yesterday. He put off the trial until today, when he is expected to consider William's proposal.

At the defense table are Attorneys Elisha Hanson, Joseph A. Cantrel and Samuel F. Beach.

The U. S. Army Air Forces Now Open Officers' Training To All Qualified Men (18 to 26 inclusive) In Business — In High School — In College. Apply NOW.

IF you are itching to be in the thick of the fight—and you'd like to slip those Japs and Nazis a man-sized dose of their own medicine—

Then here's your chance to do something about it!

The U. S. Army Air Forces urgently need every young man in America who can qualify for the New Officers' Training Program. And 100,000 are needed as of today.

NEW SIMPLIFIED REQUIREMENTS

The Army Air Forces have always picked their officer candidates from America's top young men. That always will be so.

But the method of selection has been recently changed to include single and married men in business, industry, high school—as well as in college—who can meet the new simplified requirements for physical and mental fitness.

When accepted and when facilities are ready, you will go into Aviation Cadet training, receive $75 a month with expenses paid.

In less than a year—usually 8 months—you can try for an Officer's Commission—as a Bombardier, a Navigator or a Pilot—"The Three Musketeers of the Air"! And you'll be up there ready to "dish it out" from a big, blunt-nosed bomber or sleek pursuit ship.

Or if you have had the necessary college courses—you can likely win a commission in ground service—in Armament, Communications, Engineering, Meteorology or Photography.

This past year approximately 80% of all Aviation Cadets won commissions. So your chances are excellent.

ADVANCEMENT AND PAY

As a Second Lieutenant with the U.S. Army Air Forces, your pay ranges from $183 to $245 a month. Advancement should be rapid because of the tremendous expansion of the Army Air Forces.

After the war—all the brilliant opportunities in commercial aviation await you!

WHAT TO DO NOW

If you want to do some real fighting for America—up there where the eyes of the world are watching . . . if you want years of solid achievement you wouldn't trade for anything . . . then there's an honored place waiting for you in the Army Air Forces. And we want you!

For further information . . . drop in any Army Recruiting and Induction Station listed below for a friendly chat. If you would like to enlist now with one of the Examining Boards, arrangements can be made for you to take your mental and physical examinations the same day.

The sooner you apply, the sooner you will go on the list for immediate training. The wings of vengeance are growing in America's skies. Assure your place now in the greatest air fleet of all time—apply today.

NOTE: Those under 21 years of age will require parents' or guardian's consent. Birth certificates and three letters of recommendation will be required of all applicants.

THREE WAYS TO ENLIST

All Men of 18 to 26 Years (inclusive) who pass their Aviation Cadet examination and apply for immediate Air Cadet training,

1. may enlist as privates in the Army Air Forces (unassigned) and serve there until their turns come for Aviation Cadet training,

2. or they may enlist in the Air Force Enlisted Reserve and wait until they are ordered to report for Aviation Cadet training.

3. In addition to the two ways outlined above college men and high school seniors (upon entering college) aged 18 to 26, inclusive, may enlist in the Air Force Enlisted Reserve and continue their schooling, provided they maintain satisfactory scholastic standings.

Upon graduation or withdrawal from college, men will be assigned to active duty at a training center as facilities become available.

If the necessity of war demands, the deferred status in the Army Reserve may be terminated at any time by the Secretary of War.

The new Army Air Force Enlisted Reserve Plan is part of an over-all Army Enlisted Reserve Corps program shortly to be announced. This program will provide opportunities for college men to enlist in other branches of the Army on a deferred basis and to continue their education through graduation if a satisfactory standard of work is maintained. In case of necessity the Secretary of War shall determine when they may be called to active duty.

Men so enlisted shall have the opportunity of competing for vacancies in officer's candidate schools.

This plan has been approved in the belief that continuance of education will develop capacities for leadership. (Reserve enlistment will not alter regulations regarding established R. O. T. C. plans.)

Youngster of 14 Is a Professional At Legerdemain

Pittsburgh (U.P.).—Gilpbert Daniels, 14, youngest professional magician in this area, is the envy of all the neighborhood kids.

For Gilbert can pull rabbits out of hats, read minds and do most everything the older mystics have done.

A protege of his magic-minded scoutmaster, Kenneth Dietz, Gilbert inherited the honor of being the youngest magic maker when his teacher was inducted into the Army.

The youth had been acting as assistant to Dietz, performing as drummer, chalk-talk artist, and proving an apt pupil in rope twirling, mind reading and dramatics. He also designed most of the apparatus used in the act, making it in his manual training class at Swissvale High School.

When he was drafted, Dietz left most of his magic equipment in care of his protege. The boy, during his five years in the magic "business" has acted as assistant at over 100 performances Dietzk has given.

He is the youngest member of Mystic 52, Pittsburgh Musicians Club, and has already attended a convention of the International Brotherhood of Magicians at Cincinnati.

"I guess I didn't realize he'd grow up so soon," McCall said when asked how he felt when his son enlisted.

McCall saw active duty overseas in the last war, has served six years in the Regular Army and has been a member of the Florida National Guard between wars. He is now a members of the Military Police at Fort Sheridan.

OPA Plans To Purchase Excess Tires

The Office of Price Administration is preparing machinery under which it will use Reconstruction Finance Corporation funds to purchase used tires from civilians for essential requirements or for scrapping, it was learned yesterday.

The plan, on a strictly voluntary basis, is designed to get tires and reclaimable rubber into war channels at a faster pace. It involves a campaign urging the public to sell their worn or extra tires to the Government at fixed prices.

Announcement of the program awaits conclusion of negotiations with the RFC to make the necessary money available, and establishment of OPA field arrangements to handle the purchases.

Requisitioning Vetoed

For the present, it was learned from reliable sources, OPA Administrator Leon Henderson has vetoed requisitioning of civilian tires. Officials admitted, however, that if the situatoin grows more serious and the voluntary plan fails to bring in sufficient tires, outright seizure may be necessary.

The sellers who the OPA anticipates will offer tires under the voluntary plan are:

1. Car owners who wish to turn over their tires to the Government out of patriotic reasons, or who decide that under gasoline rationing they no longer are able to derive sufficient use from their autos.

2. Persons who have purchased an extra tire or two, or who have actually hoarded tires, but now regret their decision and are willing to resell the tires.

3. Persons who have worn out one or more tires on their cars and who have less than a full set—useles sto the owners, but valuable to the Government.

Truck Tires Sought

OPA would resell the usable tires it purchases to civilian consumers entitled to new casings under the rationing program, or would turn those with a military use over to the armed services. Rubber from tires which are no longer useable or unfit for retreading would be reclaimed.

OPA officials also expect the program to bring into the market many thousands of new, unmounted tires known to be held by trucking concerns. These companies, which bought extra tires many months ago in anticipation of future needs, face the implicit threat of requisitioning if they fail to cooperate in the voluntary program, it was indicated. The tires they hold are particularly valuable in that they are of the large sizes used by military vehicles.

Gas Card Registration Begins Here Today

"units," good each for from two to three gallons a week, depending upon the mileage driven by the average motorist.

Other motorists who need their automobiles for work will get "B" cards entitling them to more gasoline during the 47-day period than other drivers, as follows:

"B-1"—6 to 10 miles a day—33 gallons.

"B-2"—10 to 14 miles a day—45 gallons.

"B-3"—14 or more miles a day—57 gallons.

Physicians, nurses, taxis, buses, Government officials, ministers and other considered as "essential" users of automobiles will get "X" cards which will permit them to tell gasoline station attendants to "fille 'er up," because the limitations will not apply to them.

Registration hours for the District will be from 3 p. m. to 8 p. m. Registrants today should be motorists whose last names begin with letters from A to L, the group from M to R will register Wednesday and those with last names ranging from S to Z will go to their nearest school building to get their cards on Thursday.

The Office of Price Administration announced yesterday that civilian defense workers when actually engaged in official tasks will be permitted gasoline without the ration cards. The OPA said it was confident that dealers' supplies would be adequate for all card holders when the rationing begins Friday and that deliveries to dealers are being held to a level that will prevent any diminution of the 401,784,000 gallons estimated to be available for private passenger automobile use during the 47-day temporary rationing period.

About one-third of the 8,500,000 automobile owners in the affected area would receive cards for the 3-gallon weekly basic ration for nonessential motorists, the OPA calculated. The other cards, designated Z and X, will allow other groups of drivers sufficient gasoline to go to and from work and to keep their businesses operating.

The mere holding of a civilian defense office is not enough to make a gasoline purchase on, it was made clear by the ruling. Such sales will be made to vehicles engaged in civilian defense activity while an area is under martial law, enemy attack or under a threatened attack; or while the vehicles are engaged in official defense practice or drill; or while engaged in defense duties or activities under the official direction of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps or the Coast Guard. Otherwise the vehicle must be engaged in rescue activity or meeting an acute emergency involving life, health or property.

Petroleum Coordinator Ickes, in the piling developments ahead of the rationing, yesterday called upon the oil industry to adopt an eight-point program aimed at increasing shipments of oil and gasoline into the Eastern shortage area. The coordinator, through the proposed program and the development of additional waterway and pipeline transportation, hopes to raise daily shipments of crude and refined products into the East to between 800,000 and 900,000 barrels daily.

But even if expectations are met, Eastern automobile owners may hope for no relief from the rationing, officials said.

Ickes' 8-Point Program

The eight-point program, in the nature of a recommendation but certain to be complied with by the industry, includes:

1. Movement of 75,000 additional barrels of heavy fuel oil daily from the Middle West and an equal amount from the Gulf Coast daily.

2. Formation of a joint tank car committee for the East, Midwest and Gulf Coast districts to obtain maximum efficiency in the use of tank cars.

3. Shipment of an additional 10,000 barrels of gasoline daily into the East by Great Lakes tankers.

4. Arrangement of East Coast refinery operations so that minimum amounts of crude oil shall be used by refineries which are making petroleum war products and so that heavy fuel oil production will be increased at the expense of gasoline.

5. Movement of an additional 100,000 barrels of east Texas crude to the East daily in order that refinery operations in that area may be maintained at 400,000 barrels daily.

6. Supplying the Southeastern States from points of entry on the Gulf Coast and the Mississippi River.

7. Utilization of rail facilities for movement of at least 100,000 barrels of crude daily up the Atlantic Seaboard from the Southwest oil fields.

8. Apportionment of crude supplies among Eastern refineries based on their runs during the last six months of 1941.

A protest that the gasoline problem should be treated as "national and not sectional" was made to Price Administrator Leon Henderson yesterday in a telegram from Governor Broughton of North Carolina. Broughton said that because of the pipeline which terminates in his State, North Carolina should receive the same concessions given "certain Atlantic Seaboard States to the north of us, the middle and western portions of which States it is reported will not be subject to the rationing program."

The capacity of the pipeline, he pointed out, was 50 million gallons a month. He reiterated his previous proposal that the Inland Waterway be used to transport gasoline and oil by barges. A copy of his telegram was sent to the President.

Groundkeepers Offer Services to Government

State College, Pa. (INS).—Pennsylvania groundkeepers have offered their services to the Federal Government emphasizing their ability to grow large areas of hardy grass such as are needed to cover airports and other strategic centers.

The greenkeepers declared they could use labor, seed, machinery and fertilizer more efficiently to grass larger sections than any group so far colled on by the Government to accomplish this task.

All Philippines Now Taken, Japs Claim

Mindanao Yields On Wainwright's Order, Tokyo Says

By the Associated Press

Tokyo (From Japanese Broadcasts), May 11.—Domei declared in a French-language broadcast tonight that "the conquest of all the islands of the Philippines by the Japanese forces now has been completely achieved."

Quoting a dispatch from Mindanao, the Japanese agency said that Maj. Gen. William F. Sharp, described as commander in chief of the American-Filipino forces in the Mindanao region, surrendered unconditionally last night.

Thus, the dispatch said, "four days after the fall of Corregidor, all the American-Filipino forces in the Philippines have submitted."

Domei said General Sharp's surrender was in accordance with "orders issued by Lieut. Gen. Jonathan M. Wainwright, commander in chief in the Philippines." These orders, it asserted, were communicated to General Sharp by Col. Jesse T. Traywick "on behalf of General Wainwright on the afternoon of May 9."

2 Colonels Reported Captured

An earlier dispatch said Col. Wade D. Killen, identified as Sharp's chief of staff, had been captured.

Domei also reported that Col. E. H. Mitchell, described as commander of the U. S. Sixty-first Regiment, had been captured by Japanese forces operating south of Lake Lanao, 35 miles northwest of Davao.

Domei said General Sharp's main body of troops had held positions near Malaybalay, 30 miles north of Davao.

Colonel Killen was said to have been captrued during operations near the north shore of the island.

Major General Sharp went to the Philippines more than a year ago for duty with the Field Artillery.

Twice Promoted Since December

Then a colonel, he has been promoted twice since the war began—to brigadier general last December 18, and to major general on April 2.

He was born at Yanktown, S. Dak., September 22, 1885, and entered the Army as an enlisted man in Company G, Second Battalion Engineers, in 1904. Commissioned from hte ranks three years later, he served in the Infantry for two years before transferring to the Field Artillery.

During the First World War he served as an artilleryman in the Meuse-Argonne offensive.

War Department records show that Colonel Killen advanced through the ranks from buck private to colonel. He was born in Colorado November 8, 1894, and entered the Army as a private May 21, 1917. He is a graduate of the Command and General Staff School ta Fort Leavenworthy, Kans., the Infantry School at Fort Benning, Ga., and the Quartermaster School at Philadelphia.

U. S. Troops Getting Tough In Australia

By Francis McCarthy
United Press Staff Correspondent.

Advanced American Training Base in Australia, May 11.—Thousands of American troops undergoing a toughening up process here soon will be in shape to hike 25 miles in one day to reach a front and to battle steadily for 10 hours after reaching it.

Hard drills and exercises are preparing the young fighting men for the day of reckoning with the Japanese. This training base, where I have spent a week, comprises several thousand acres embracing virtually all types of terrain that may be encountered on any of today's battle fronts.

The camp was established during the World War by Lord Kitchner and has been used every year since by Australian home forces.

The first things that hit the eye as one arrives at the base are hundreds upon hundreds of pup tents, rows upon rows of temporary barracks and scores of "Jeeps," the tiny British-made cars which officers use for inter-camp travel.

Elaborate Camouflage

Every precaution has been taken for the safety of the men in camp. Dispersal of personnel, tents and materials have been carried out to the nth degree. Camouflage is elaborate.

Buck private and officer alike get up at dawn. Soon after breakfast, they are in the field, regardless of weather. There is time off for lunch at midday, and then the troops hike back to camp for the night.

One night a week is devoted to night problems. Officers and noncoms attended night school three times weekly.

Camp morale is kept high by movies and entertainment facilities at the post exchange where pianos, phonographs and radios are available. Townspeople are hospitable.

The camp hospital—operated and staffed by American doctors and nurses in conjunction with the Australian Red Cross—caters to both Aussies and Yanks. Surgical cases are sent to an adjoining town, which has modern hospital facilities.

The nurses live in quarters adjacent to the hospital. They are commanded by tiny First Lieut. Frances Cecil Gunn of Augusta, Ga., whose relatives now are in Oklahoma City, Okla.

Pitcher Is Most Popular Man

The most popular man in camp is John V. Lund, 22, of Portland, Oreg., a professional baseball player, who pitched the first victory the Americans won in Australia.

His team last weekend defeated a picked Australian team, 4 to 0. Johnny fanned 16 of the 21 opponents who faced him in seven innings.

He played for Bisbee, Ariz., in 1937, for Muskogee, Okla., in 1938 and Eldorado, in the Cotton States League, in 1939-40. When drafted, he was scheduled to report to the Phillies.

American and Australian officers share a common mess and common living quarters.

An Australian, Capt. Syd Gully, is mess champion in billiards, which is the most popular pasttime among the officers, though community singing—in which Stephen Foster selections are favorites—is a close runner-up.

Quebec Leader Quits Cabinet Over Draft Bill

By the Associated Press

Ottawa, May 11.—Prime Minister Mackenzie King moved in Parliament today to legalize conscription for overseas service, and in protest P. J. A. Cardin resigned as minister of public works and transport.

King introduced a bill to amend the national resources mobilization act by deleting clause 3 which prohibits the compulsory dispatch of men outside Canada or its territorial waters. The bill, the prime minister observed, is "the logical consequence of the vote" in the recent plebiscite by which the people released the government from the pledges not to send conscripted men overseas.

Cardin is regarded as the ranking representative of French-speaking Quebec in the dominion government. In the plebiscite Quebec voted nearly 3 to 1 against freeing the government from its pledge.

In resigning, Cardin wrote that he disagreed with "the new policy of the government" and declared nothing had been established to make necessary the introduction of a measure "containing the principle of compulsory military service for overseas."

A Tough Job, But It's a Honey

Eaton, Ohio (AP).—Allen Eby and 100,000 yellow Italian honey bees make their annual trip to the Apalachiola Forest in Florida this month to raise 300 to 400 queens a day for two months and get ready for a production goal of a half a million pounds of honey this year.

Eby, whose apiaries are in nearby West Elkton, rents spots in the big Florida swamp and puts 50 to 75 bees to work at each location. Then come days of dodging alligators and chasing bears from the hives.

Women Ready for Harvest

Portland, Oreg. (U.P.). — Between 30,000 and 40,000 Multnomah County women stand ready to assist in farm crop harvest work if a labor shortage develops, according to Emery H. Worth, State farm placement officer of the United States Employment Service.

If Raided Don't Get Panicky Like Japs, Col. Dupuy Warns

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, May 11.—The Army's recent raid on Tokyo showed that Japan apparently had "no internal defense against sychological warfare, no linking of national effort to combat panic," Col R. Ernest Dupuy, of the War Department's Bureau of Public Relations, declared today.

"Some day we are going to get a token air raid," Col. Dupuy added. "It's objective will be the production of fear, panic and uncertainty in the minds of our people. Are we going to play it like soldiers, or are we going to cackle and squawk on the air like barnyard hens when a hawk flies over?"

Details Recounted

Addressing the National Association of Broadcasters, Col. Dupuy recounted details of the Tokyo raid:

"The bombers who performed that task winged their way in broad daylight, riding the radio beam of a Japanese station which at that time was broadcasting a little rhapsody on the scenic beauties of Japan, nestling peacefully in the assurance that it could never be bombed. Suddenly he went off the air. The radio monitor in the bomber formation heard the Jap announcer scream 'Enemy bombers coming! Coming fast! Many bombers!'

"As the bomb sticks whirled down, this Nip announcer kept on the job. Screaming in high-pitched panic, he called our shots in a play-by-play description, noted the fires caused, shouted casualty bulletins. Our ships received the fullest information that anyone could want, on their accomplishments.

Price Asks "Rule of Reason"

"It was not until 24 hours later that the tone began to change, that casualties and damage were played down. In the meantime, we had received from the enemy precious confirmation of our successes. Why? Because it was a complete surprise, because there apparently existed at that time in Japan no internal defense against psychological warfare, no linking of national effort to combat panic."

Archibald MacLeish, director of the Office of Facts and Figures, observed:

"We will tell you of the information the Government wants delivered to the people. But we will leave it to you to devise the effective means by which the job can be done.

"It is not your antennae or your electrical installations or your control rooms that we want. It is you—your brains and your hearts—your experience and your ingenuity. If it were relying only on facilities, the Government would do far better to provide its own facilities."

MacLeish expressed the opinion the Government and the radio industry came to an understanding of their mutual wartime job" a little too quickly and easily," adding:

"What do we mean when we agree that we are going to cooperate to carry to the country the information it must have if citizens are to exercise the rights and perform the duties of the citizens of a democracy?

"We mean cooperation in terms of men as well as facilities. We do not mean that the industry is going to make certain facilities available to the Government; we mean that radio is going to do the job.

"What the industry can really give that the Government cannot readily and immediately supply is the brains and hearts and energy of the men who run it—the men it has brought together, trained and taugh over 20 years and more of its hardworking history.

"You have the experience that has made American radio what it is. You have the inventivenes sand the courage and the imagination which have made American radio one of the forces of enlightenment of the world. We ask you to mobilize these qualities for the winning of this war. We ask you to conceive and perfect, yourselves, and to put into effective operation, yourselves, the methods by which this people may be reminded of its cause, warned against its enemies, foreign and domestic, informed of the sacrifices it must make and the labors it must perform."

Another Blackout Problem Solved

MARIA MONTEZ, comely movie star, has solved the problem of sudden meetings in the dark with the small bell (arrow) hanging from her instep. As she steps neatly along during blackouts in Hollywood, the sound of the bell gives fair warning to approaching passersby that someone else is sharing the sidewalk.

the 100 cars which will make the test.

Van Duzer and Young cautioned everyone on the streets—pedestrians as well as emergency drivers—not to move for at least five minutes after the lights go out. It takes that long, they explain, for eyes to become adjusted to the lack of light.

As was the case in previous blackouts, traffic hazards are the principal concern of defense and civic officials. Pedestrians are urged to be particularly careful in crossing intersections. Although emergency vehicles are not to drive more than 15 miles per hour, they must use dimmed lights, which make pedestrians practically invisible to drivers. Patented light hoods will be tried on some District cars.

Drivers of all cars which do not bear the official emergency stickers are ordered, as before, to pull up to the curb, park, leave the keys in the car and walk to the nearest shelter.

Government buildings will be blacked out as completely as possible, Charles A. Peters, of the Public Buildings Administration, said last night. He promised "even better cooperation that we were able to give during the last test."

No official word has yet been had from the Navy Yard or the new War Department Building in Arlington, but they are expected to have a short "token" blackout during at least a part of the half hour.

More than 20,000 civilian defense volunteers in nearby Maryland and Virginia will cooperate in the Metropolitan Area's blackout test tonight.

Defense Director Albert E. Brault of Montgomery County and J. Robert Sherwood of Prince Georges have appealed for the cooperation of all citizens to make the test a 100 per cent blackout. Prince Georges officials will use for the first time the newly installed central alarm system in Hyattsville.

In Arlington, County Manager Frank Hanrahan urged dog owners to keep their pets inside during the blackout. Air raid wardens have experienced "considerable difficulty" with dogs in previous tests, he said. The City of Alexandria and Fairfax County in Virginia also will take part in the test.

The line runs between the big Orkla sulphur mine and the sea. A big transformer was said to have been blown up, and the guard was reported found with a 1000-crown not in his pocket.

Vinson Foresees 7-Million Army

later. In the committee he said:

"It must be remembered that the provisions of this bill appply to a contemplated Army of eight million men and a Navy of one million men.

Vinson's top prospectus for the Army was more than double the 3,600,000 men the War Department has set as its goal by the end of 1942, and one-third higher than the largest figure yet to be mentioned publicly by any department official.

Patterson Gave Hint

Before the House Military Committee last week, Undersecretary of War Robert Patterson casually mentioned a six-million-man Army as being in the Army's calculations of future strength. He repeated the figure to reporters after the committee hearing, but observed that he had not indicated when an Army of this size might be achieved.

The bill which the Rules Committee yesterday approved for two hours of general debate in the House today, would grant pay rises to enlisted men and officers in the lowest commissioned grade in the Army, Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard. The measure also would make readjustments in the pay of Army and Navy nurses, Coast and Geodetic Survey and Public Health Service personnel, and in allowances of ranking Army officers.

The bill would lift the present range of basic enlisted pay scales—from $21 a month for men with less than four months' service to $126 a month for master sergeants and chief petty officers—to a minimum of $42 and a maximum of $138.

Second lieutenants and ensigns would receive increases to $1800 a year from the present pay of $1500.

Army and Navy nurses with less than three or more than nine years in the service are paid now on a range from $70 to $130 a month. The proposed scale would range from $90 to $135 and would add a $150-a-month salary class for nurses with more than 12 years service.

Vinson's committee approved several amendments to be offered in the House today. One amendment would terminate the new pay scales 12 months after the war, on the theory that permanent pay legislation should not be enacted under war conditions. Another would provide that commissions granted technicians or specialists should remain temporary until the officer had undergone a course of naval training.

Curb Inflation With Higher Taxes, Henderson Testifies

more than $20 a week, if single, and $30, if married. In addition, Gore asked an "overall" tax on incomes starting at 6 per cent on $1040 to $1560 salaries and ranging upward "until no person would have remaining to him, after payment of taxes and investment in Government bonds, a sum in excess of $25,000." The war bond tax could be credited against this over-all tax.

The compulsory savings and progressive tax features of Gore's program went to the Ways and Means Committee, which recently heard Morgenthau in opposition to enforced savings. Henderson, an advocate of enforced savings, passed over that controversial subject to urge the program already laid down by the Treasury.

Vote Postponed

The Ways and Means Committee, reluctant to cut deeper on exemptions but up against Administration pressure, meanwhile postponed a vote on individual tax schedules until later in the week. Colin F. Stam, Congressional staff expert, who opposed lowering exemptions and recommended more moderate surtaxes, was called back to testify today.

One possible compromise in the offing, if the committee can be won over to any cuts in exemptions, was a plan discussed in some quarters to start the surtaxes on the present $750 to $1200 tax base. Those in lower income brackets would be subjected only to the normal tax. This in effect would avert the otherwise sharp impact of the base cut on middle bracket incomes already singled out for steeply increased new surtaxes.

While the committee received from Henderson a new mass of evidence on the mounting threat of inflation, Chairman George of the Senate Finance Committee indicated the Morgenthau-Henderson recommendations for cuts in exemptions may run into more trouble in the Senate.

As an alternative to raising $1,100,000,000 more revenue from a slash in the base, George suggested a withholding tax of from 5 to 10 per cent on wages, salaries and dividends. George said the Treasury would place a "terrific burden" on low income groups and predicted Congress may have to turn instead to either a withholding tax or a sales tax.

Before the Ways and Means Committee, Henderson stressed the seriousness of the "inflationary potential" created by cuts in consumer goods that he predicted would drop civilian supplies to 1932 depression levels by the end of 1943. More than 300 per cent more purchasing power will be reaching for these supplies than in 1932, unless "all of the controls and stabilization we can get" are invoked, he told reporters.

At a brief news conference, he said "we have to get stabilization of wages," along with all other controls. Members said he presented a stronger case for wage controls before the committee, and suggested he would go to the President for wage ceilings or freezing if the present program doesn't do the job.

The Price Administrator is understood to have testified that every dollar's increase in wages above present levels at full employment made for a $2 push toward inflation. Likewise, he advised the committee that every dollar of taxes taken out of the purchasing power pool amounted to $2 in its anti-inflation effects.

Henderson was said to have reiterated his known views in favor of compulsory savings, but stressed rather his points of accord with the Treasury at whose suggestion he testified.

He was as one with Morgenthau in opposition to a sales tax. He later told reporters he took the position that a sales levy "would add to the difficulties of rationing for the lowest income groups," by preventing equitable distribution of goods. The tax, on top of present prices, would bar purchase of certain commodities by low-income civilians, while those with fat pocketbooks could continue to buy, he pointed out.

Tako maPark Officials Change Meeting Date

The monthly meeting date of the Takoma Park mayor and town council was changed last night from the second Monday in each month to the third Monday. The change was made to permit members of the council to attend the monthly meetings of the County Civic Federation. Heretofore, the meeting dates of the two organizations have conflicted.

Mayor Oliver Youngblood named Councilman Herman C. Heffner, Millward Taft and former Mayor Frederick L. Lewton to be delegates to the federation meetings. John Sidell, Joseph Martin and Corporation Counsel Donald D. Lamond were named alternates.

B. & O. Tracks Closed After Trains Collide

Frederick, Md., May 11.—Both tracks of the main Baltimore and Ohio Railroad freight line were closed today when five cars of an eastbound freight train were derailed near Limekiln.

The wreck was said to have occurred when the locomotive of an eastbound freight rammed an engine pushing a slower train. Cecil A. Robinson, Baltimore crewman, leaped from the train before the crash and was uninjured. Officials expected to have the tracks cleared before morning.

The Spanish armada in 1588 consisted of 132 ships, 3165 cannon, 10,854 seamen and 23,200 soldiers.

All-out war has imposed a great traffic load upon American railroads. Movements of troops and war material must have first call. But you can help us maintain regular civilian rail transportation, by doing any one or all of these things:

● Make reservations as early as you can. Buy your ticket at the same time, if possible. Round-trip tickets save time, worry and money. If you must cancel reservations, do so promptly, thus releasing space for others.

Dentist Invents Rubber Substitute

Tires of New Material Are Being Tested On D. C. Taxicabs

By the Associated Press

A West Virginia dentist, it developed yesterday, is the inventor who has excited Government experts by declaring he can make a rubber substitute from natural gas, coal, wood and grain.

Dr. Glenn L. Casto of Spencer, W. Va., who talked with reporters in company with Senator Kilgore (Democrat), West Virginia, was modest about his product. He said it was no "cure-all" for the present lack of natural rubber, but declared it had:

Been used to make a new automobile tire which already has run 4300 miles ad is continuing to give good service.

Been used to retreat a tire which was run 10,000 miles and, when removed for examination, was found to have one-third the tread remaining.

Used on Cabs in Capital

Senator Kilgore commented:

"Tires retreaded with the material have been used on taxicabs in and aruond Washington and have been giving as good service as rubber, according to the reports of the users."

News of the inventor's claims leaked out of Government agencies some ten days ago. At that time, the word was that samples shown by the inventor had qualities superior to synthe tic rubber and equal to or superior to crude. The inventor was not telling his formula, however, and Government experts were keeping their fingers crossed while a laboratory was being built for a showdown test.

Dr. Castro said that what is under construction is not a laboratory but a pilot test plant in West Virginia.

This plant, he said, soon will be turning out several thousand pounds of his product a day to be used in large scale tests on commercial vehicles.

As for the financial end, he said "we have not asked the Government for any money nor have they volunteered any financial support even for experimental work."

Little Critical Materials Needed

He was ready, he added, to make his method available to any producer designated by the Government for the duration of the war provided only that this basic rights after the war were protected.

His product is not, he emphasized, a synthetic rubber but has physical properties akin to crude rubber while differing from it in chemical properties.

Furthermore, he asserted that plants for mass production of the product could be constructed quickly and would require very little of the critical war materials of which there is a shortage. The product itself, he said, could be produced cheaply by quantity methods.

Casto was educated at Ohio State University. His training for his profession included instruction in Chemistry, and he said he had, as a hobby, made chemical experiments for many years.

Russian Seed Arrives

Meanwhile, Representative August H. Andresen of Minnesota said the first shipment of kok-sagyz seed had arrived in the United States by airplane and that experimental planting of the Russian dandelion seed for rubber production would begin immediately.

Andresen, a member of the House Agricultural Committee who urged the State Department in mid-March to negotiate with Russia for the seed, said 139 pounds had been received by the Agricultural Department by air and more was en route.

"This seed will be distributed to 20 experimental stations in the United States for experimental purposes this year and if results are favorable," he cleared, "we will have a solution for the rubber shortage in this country.

"Information received here from Russia disclosed that with the latest type kok-sagtz seed production of rubber ran from 150 to 200 pounds per acre."

The Minnesotan said the plant could be grown in any area having an annual rainfall of 25 inches. Seeded two to three pounds per acre in rows like corn in the spring, the crop can be harvested for rubber in the fall, he said.

Touring Indians Boost Sales of War Stamps

Chicago (U.P.).—Five braves, two squaws and an eight-year-old papoose named Sammy White Cloud are aiding sales of war bonds and stamps by presenting their colorful native tribal dances, according to the Chicago Defense Council.

The dancers, who hail from the Jemez pueblo, near Santa Fe, N. M., are sponsored by the Santa Fe railroad and the United States Treasury, and are said to be among the finest Indian dancers in America.

They are descendants of the Southwest's fierce Indian warriors and their dances portray the ancient rites and rituals of a civilization that flowered before the discovery of America by white men.

After appearances in Chicago and surrounding territory, they will tour principal cities in the United States.

Soldier of Today Taller, Heavier Than in 1917

An increase in both weight and stature distinguishes the modern American soldier from the average citizen-soldier who entered the Army in 1917, it was recently revealed by the War Department following a study of medical records.

In 1917 the average man entering the Army was 67.49 inches in height, but the records show the present soldier is 68.19 inches tall. This constitutes an increase of .7 of an inch.

The average weight of the 1917 soldier was 141.5 pounds, whereas the man entering the Army today tips the scales at an average of 151.3 pounds, an increase of 9.8 pounds.

Patentee May Not Fix Prices, Court Rules

By William R. Spear
Associated Press Staff Writer

The Supreme Court yesterday upheld the Justice Department's anti-trust suits against ten leading firms in the hardboard industry and the Univis Lens Co., makers of bifocal eyeglasses. It ruled that agency and licensing agreements in these fields constituted illegal price fixing even though patents were involved.

The holder of a patent "cannot control the resale price of patented articles which he has sold . . . by stipulating for price maintenance by his vendees" without violating the Sherman Antitrust Act, the court said. There was no dissent in either of the two cases.

The hardboard case involved agreements made by the Masonite Corporation of Chicago with nine other companies which manufactured or sold building material. Masonite holds patents on hardboard, a composition board made of wood chips. Some of the other firms hold patents on competitive products.

The Firms Involved

The other firms involved were Celotex Corporation of Chicago, Certain-teed Products Corporation of New York, Johns-Manville Sales Corporation of New York, Insurance Co. of Minneapolis, Flintkote Co. of New York, National Gypsum Co. of Buffalo, Wood Conversion Co. of Cloquet, Minn., Armstrong Cork Co. of Lancaster, Pa., and Dant & Russell, Inc., of Portland, Oreg.

Under the agreements Masonite appointed the other firm as agents for the sale of its hardboard and set the minimum prices, maximum terms and other conditions of sale.

The Supreme Court's opinion, delivered by Justice Douglas, said that except for two factors, "there can be no doubt that this is a price fixing combination which is illegal per se under the Sherman Act." These two factors were the agency agreements and the Masonite patents. And the opinion struck down both of them as defenses.

In regard to the agreements, the court found that the circumstances under which they were made "leave no room for doubt that all (the companies) had an awareness of the general scope and purpose of the undertaking."

Delegated Authority

"Nor can the fact that Masonite alone fixed the prices and that the other appellees never consulted with Masonite concerning them make the combination any the less illegal," it added. "Prices are fixed when they are agreed upon. The fixing of prices by one member of a group pursuant to express delegation, acquiescence or understanding is just as illegal as the fixing of prices by direct, joint action."

In regard to the patents, the court declared that "the owner of a patent cannot extend his statutory grant by contract or agreement. A patent affords no immunity for a monopoly not fairly or plainly within the grant. . . . The patentee exhausts his limited privilege when he disposes of the product to the . . . agent. He then has, so far as the Sherman Act is concerned, no greater rights to price maintenance than the owner of an unpatented commodity would have."

The Univis Co. of Dayton, Ohio, makes multifocal lens blanks, rough pieces of glass composed of two or more pieces of different refractive power, on which it holds patents. Its case involved licenses under which it allegedly fixed prices. It licensed wholesalers to purchase the lens blanks and finish and sell them, it licensed finishing retailers to purchase the blanks and grind and polish them and adjust them in frames, and it licensed prescription retailers to prescribe and sell finished lenses to customers.

Price Spread Told

The court's opinion, by Chief Justice Stone, said that Univis collected 50 cents royalty for each pair of lens blanks sold and that "the prices prescribed and maintained under the licensing system are: $3.25 a pair for the blanks sold by the lens company to wholesalers, and $4 a pair for those sold to finishing retailers; $7 a pair for finished lenses sold by wholesalers; $16 a pair for white, and 20 for tinted, lenses sold to consumers by prescription and finishing retailers."

The decision ruled that "merely because the licensee takes the final step in the manufacture of the patented product, by doing work on the blank which he has purchased from the patentee's licensee, it does not follow that the patentee can control the price at which the finished lens is sold."

War Bars Motor Traffic From Mountain Summit

Bar Harbor, Me. (U.P.).—Automobiles will be barred this year from the summit of Cadillac Mountain which dominates Acadia National Park, but motor traffic may be permitted to go part way up the mountain if suitable turning space can be provided.

Wartime restrictions will not affect the rest of Mount Desert Island's huge network of scenic highways, according to B. L. Hadley, assistant superintendent of the pary, and the usual influx of vacationing motorists is anticipated.

Last year 423,088 persons and 106,022 automobiles visited the park, which boasts 33 miles of major motor highways. There are about 75 miles of major town and state highways on the island, and about 55 miles of carriage roads.

Jury Selection Begins in Trial Of Former Model for Murder

MADELINE WEBB
Goes on Trial

MRS. VERA WEBB
Dancer's Mother

By the Associated Press

New York, May 11.—While her mother insisted, "My daughter couldn't be guilty of this crime," Oklahoma-born Madeline Webb, a former photographers' model, sat composedly in General Sessions courtroom today as selection of a jury began to try her for murder in the slaying of a Polish woman refugee.

Two codefendants, Eli Shonbrun, 33, whom the State has described as 28-year-old Miss Webb's boy friend, and John D. Cullen, 45, sat impassively as prospective jurors were questioned. Only four had been selected by the end of the day's session.

The three, together with Shonbrun's uncle, Murray Hirschl, are accused of first-degree murder in the suffocation slaying of Mrs. Susan Flora Reich, 55-year-old wife of a New Jersey wax processor, in a hotel suite last March.

Officials of the district attorney's office have charged that robbery was the motive for the crime and that Miss Webb lured the elderly woman to the hotel room which she and Shonbrun had rented under the names of Mr. and Mrs. Ted Leopold.

Mrs. Reich was found strangled, bound and gagged and robbed of a $1500 diamond ring and other jewelry.

The girl's mother, Mrs. Vera Webb, of Stillwater, Okla., told reporters:

"I don't know anything about this man Shonbrun, or the others—but I know my daughter could not be guilty of this crime."

Civil Service Theft Trials Hit Legal Snag

Trial of five persons charged with stealing Civil Service Commission records bogged down yesterday under legal technicalities concerning admissibility of certain portions of signed statements made by defendants to agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Justice James W. Morris of the District Court, where the trial is being held, adjourned the jury until 10 a. m. today after first excusing it from court proceedings during the afternoon, when counsel undertook a prolonged discussion on points of law.

Subject of Controversy

Principal controversy centered around a statement by Lawrence L. Haynes, defendant. Subject of discussion was whether Haynes' signed reason for "pulling out" of activities surrounding the alleged theft of the files could be admitted in evidence. Defendants Walter A. C. Camp and Werner J. Orbach contended that the "reason" was damaging to them on prejudicial grounds.

Haynes' statement was one of 11 discussed by the prosecution and defense counsel as to presentability before the jury. The statements covered a period beginning February 7, 1941, and ended March 21, 1941. Prosecutor Charles B. Murray, Assistant United States District Attorney, described the statements as accounts by all five defendants of their connection with the alleged theft of the Federal files. Prosecutor Murray indicated to newsmen after adjournment that he expected to proceed with the reading of the statements today unless further technicalities arose.

Others on Trial

Also on trial are Harlan G. Crandall, former Civil Service Commission employe, and Miss Katherine Kay, who has been described in court as financial secretary of the Standard Business Service, where the personnel records were said to have been taken and transcribed.

Camp and Orbach are president and vice president, respectively, of the Vita-Health Food Vo., which had a financial interest in the Standard Busines Service, according to testimony. Haynes has been described by the Government as an employe of the company, which formerly was operated by the defendant's father, Lynford J. Haynes, who died January 21, 1941.

State Workers Buy Bonds

St. Paul, Minn. (U.P.).—Minnesota State employes are contributing more than $32,000 monthly for the purchase of defense bonds. Gov. Harold E. Stassen disclosed that 5222 State employes have signed payroll deduction pledges averaging $6.36 a month.

Tonight's Blackout

One of the chief objectives of tonight's blackout is to establish whether the metropolitan area's communications system needs decentralization. That is a matter for civilian defense officials to determine. But the obligation of residents to help make the test effective is nevertheless very clear. All that is required is proof of the community's ability to carry on with minimum disruption of normal routine. So far there has been no such proof. Some persons have made a point of being away from home during previous blackouts; others have simply turned out their lights and sat in the dark. As a result homes have been blacked out, but there has been a considerable evasion of simple blackout preparations. In this connection it is unfortunate that tonight's blackout, of half-an-hour's duration, will not come until sometime between 10 p. m. and 2 a. m.

For almost certainly those who have yet to take such tests seriously will get ready for bed early and simply snap out the lights for the night when the warning signal is given. The lateness of the test is officially ascribed to the desire to permit persons registering for gasoline rationing cards to get home before the blackout. But it does seem that defense officials could have picked a night when it would have been practicable to set an earlier blackout hour. There is, to be sure, sound sense in the policy of giving progressively shorter advance notice of blackouts. But the more often tests are made soon after dark, the greater will be the pressure on the recalcitrants to match the blackout preparations of their fellows.

Prison-Made

The problem of finding outlets for the products of prison labor has been largely solved for the time being by the war needs of the country. Federal penitentiaries are turning out textiles, tent materials, shoes, metal wares, etc., for the Government in greatly increased quantities. Prisoners are working longer hours, with two, sometimes three, shifts in operation. Vocational training programs are also being carried on inside prison walls to fit the inmates for war work when they are released.

State institutions, however, have so far not participated directly in these war production activities, because of uncertainties regarding the intent of the law forbidding interstate shipments of prison-made goods not produced in Federal penitentiaries for use of the Federal Government. Attorney General Biddle has just advised the President that in his opinion the law does not prevent the Federal Government from buying goods made in State prisons. As a result it is estimated that some 140,000 prison workers and several million dollars worth of machinery will now become available for war production purposes. A few days ago it was reported that a large proportion of the prison-made war goods would be taken by Allied governments. In any case they will not compete with the output of free labor or enter normal commercial channels.

The direct contribution of prisoners to furtherance of our war effort will doubtless be substantial. But of much greater importance is the fact that prisoners know they are helping to win the war. The morale-building effect of participation in the common cause has a value beyond calculation in material terms. It is greatly to be hoped that the end of the war will not slow down the pace of the rehabilitation program, even though it will necessarily change its character. The success of that program depends upon providing useful employment that will be a safeguard against demoralization and will at the same time equip prisoners for work upon their release.

Efforts along that line have been severely handicapped in peacetimes by increasingly severe restrictions upon sales of prison-made goods, due to fears of unfair competition with the products of free labor. Those fears are only temporarily in abeyance; the legislation to which they gave rise is still on the statute books.

Psychological Offensive

In his great radio broadcast of last Sunday Winston Churchill praised the militant, aggressive spirit of the British people as manifested in their desire to come to the closest grips with the enemy. He was understandably vague, however, as to whether or not Great Britain was planning to open a second land front in Europe this spring or summer. He would only commit himself to the extent of saying that "We must not fail them (the British people) either in daring or in wisdom."

This vagueness is all to the good. It is an instrument in that war of nerves which to an increasing degree the Allies are now in a position to wage against the Third Reich. Churchill's fighting speech was the opening gun. As long as the Nazis are not sure whether the Allies will attempt a land invasion of Europe or not, they cannot effectively dispose of their forces with a maximum of efficiency.

If they make too extended preparations for an Allied invasion, they may have to strip their forces in the East. If, on the other hand, they concentrate too much of their power in the Russian sector, they may leave their rear exposed. This tantalizing uncertainty as to what the Allies will do will hardly add to Hitler's peace of mind or the peace of mind of the German people.

Already Germany has begun to feel the increasing weight and force of the British aerial offensive. No amount of censorship or suppression of news by Dr. Goebbels has succeeded in hiding from the German people the grim facts of what has happened to Rostock and Luebeck. Now they are under notice that what happened at Rostock and Luebeck is only the curtain-raiser to what is about to happen to many other German cities. For Dr. Goebbels will not succeed in keeping the substance of what Churchill said from gaining currency in the Reich.

No people are less prepared for such a fierce and persistent aerial assault than are the Germans. Until the Russian campaign the course of the war was one of successive triumphs for their arms. They were promised by Goering and others that their cities would never be bombed. But the habit of victory was broken on the plains of Russia and by the rigors of the Russian winter. The ground is ready in Germany for a psychological offensive by the Allies.

This offensive Winston Churchill has now launched. His address was as much directed to Germans as to the people of Britain, her empire and her allies. It was a reminder to the Germans of what has happened to them, a warning of what is yet in store for them. For Churchill did not mince words. And those words will be poured into Germany over the B. B. C. and will lacerate German consciences and trouble their sleep. The magic of Hitler's assurances of safety and victory no longer works.

Some Germans, to be sure, may seek comfort in the thought that Churchill does not really mean what he says when he talks of the growing strength of the United Nations, the latter's growing superiority in the air, the certainty that air bombardment of the Reich will increase. But this will be Job's comfort. The news must now be circulating of German cities that have been and are being laid low by fleets of giant bombers. So the people of Germany will listen, with at least one ear, to the solemn words of warning to them that there is no hope for them as long as the monstrous evil that is Hitlerism keeps Germany in its grip.

Words are weapons. But they are never so powerful as when they are accompanied by deeds. A year ago the speech Churchill made Sunday would have fallen on barren ground so far as the Germans are concerned. This is no longer the case. Every bomb that drops on a German factory or harbor, every telegram notifying a German family that it has lost a father or son or brother on the Eastern Front adds persuasion to the words which Churchill has addressed to the German people.

In particular they are under notice that if poison gas is used against Russia, this weapon will be turned against them by Great Britain. And, in some respects, the Germans are far less prepared to fight gas warfare (however prepared they are to wage it) than are the British. In the British Isles every man, woman and child has his or her gas mask. There are few such masks for civilians in Germany. For Hitler planned to win the war by an unceasing offensive. He knew his enemies would in no circumstances resort to gas first. He could, therefore, bide his time. Should he employ that weapon now, it would be an act of desperation on his part showing that his need of a temporary victory on the battlefield is so great that he is prepared to pay for that victory by having that terror unleashed on his own people. Because of Churchill's warning, however, he may think better of it.

The ground is quaking under the Fuehrer's feet. The convulsion may or may not be far off. But the signs of such a seismic disturbance are already beginning to be noticeable. And in his magnificant fighting speech Sunday Churchill gave nature a helping hand.

Nameless One

From now on Government officials will not be permitted to refer to the Japanese Emperor by name in any of their public speeches. The Office of Facts and Figures, it seems, is enforcing this prohibition at the request of the Department of State, which is afraid that every unkind mention of H——o merely serves "to consolidate the will of the Japanese people." It is suggested that orators who feel a desire to get personal, as the saying goes, should take it out instead on "the Japanese war lords."

Offhand this recalls the squeamish newspaper publisher who, fearful that the word might offend the religious sensibilities of certain subscribers, forbade his sports writers ever to refer to the St. Louis National League Baseball Club as the "Cardinals." However, the attitude of the State Department is not as silly as that. There are, we dare say, many Japanese who still have no sympathy with the mad ambitions of the Black Dragon boys, and still less sympathy with their methods. There is reason to believe, for example, that former Ambassador, Admiral Nomura, now among the diplomatic hostages at White Sulphur Springs, is of them. But such Japanese, it may be assumed, are also religiously devoted to their Emperor.

Until the first week in December an impression was prevalent in this country that the Emperor himself was gravely perturbed by the doings of the military clique and by the deplorable situation which had resulted from the costly and inconclusive China War. Then, in the general indignation over Pearl Harbor, it was assumed that this picture of the Japanese Emperor was, like his touching little poem in praise of world peace, just part of the elaborate program of hypocrisy and deceit whereby we were caught off guard. What the real sentiments of the Japanese Emperor concerning this war may be, or what efforts, if any, he may personally have made to avert it, we have, of course, no way of knowing. Possibly the State Department has. Anyway, we shall not end the war any sooner, or render victory any more decisive by shouting names at him half way across the world. Indeed, we may hope to shorten it—if psychological warfare has any meaning—by the verbal restraint suggested by the State Department.

Dean Phillips

It was once said of the late Dean Phillips that he was a man of broad scholarship, of deep sympathies and charming fellowship. So he was, as his friends will attest. But the description falls far short of sizing up the man. For it was given to Dr. Phillips as to few men to exercise a profound influence on many with whom he came in casual contact. That was due not so much to his exceptional eloquence as a preacher and chaplain as to his ability to transmit to his fellows a measure of the spiritual strength which he possessed in such abundance. All his life long he sought "a deep and lasting appreciation of the stainless beauty of moral law." The quotation is from his prayer opening the Senate session this year and it provides a key to the character of the man.

For 18 years Dr. Phillips served this community, first as rector of the Epiphany Church and then as dean of Washington Cathedral. His influence in church circles outside the Capital, however, was very great. Had he wished he could have been a bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church. Yet he preferred to carry on his ever-increasing duties here. Since 1927 he had been the chaplain of the Senate and only last November he was elected dean of the Cathedral. To his considerable responsibilities he brought a keen mind, a liberal spirit, and an abiding interest in the world about him. His passing is a sad blow to Washington and to the Nation.

SPRING PLOWING

These are the foes of all mankind—
Vines that throttle the growing corn,
Weeds that would not let us find
Wheat for a world by hungers torn.
Plowshares strike, and the arms are strong,
Tearing the tangled roots asunder;
We will go through fields with a song—
We will plow them under!

These are the foes from the hidden lair
Deep in the rich soil we have won;
Theirs is the harvest of despair—
We will turn the roots to the sun!
Keep the eyes on the furrows here,
After the rains and the nights of thunder;
Poisoned vines and weeds of fear—
We will plow them under!

Marching banners of the corn
Will arise where we pass by,
Waves of wheat once more adorn
Fields that surge into the sky.
Thistles shall not flourish where
Free men work again their wonder;
Burrs and thorns of old despair—
We will plow them under!

Rationing Loopholes

I have just read the proposed rules for rationing gasoline and it would appear to me to be wide open to abuse.

I do not drive to work. I like neither the congestion, the crazy way they drive in this town, nor the lack of parking facilities. For the first time since I bought my first car in 1918, I am using the buses. I am thoroughly in accord with the idea that the fellow who is willing to put up with the inconvenience of driving here should have the gas with which to do it.

However, if he is to have gas at my expense, and in the last analysis that is the situation, I feel that he should be obligated to use it to the best ability. As far as I can see, there is nothing to prevent a man from getting gas with which to ride to work and then leaving his car home for his wife to use, or saving up his gas for week-end joy rides, and using the buses just like I am. I'll bet he does, too.

In addition, if he is going to use my gas, I feel that he should fill his car up with other people and keep them from tramping on my toes in the bus. I do not think that the system of open hitch-hiking that was in effect during the other war would work now. Drivers are afraid to pick up strangers, and pedestrians are afraid to get in with strange drivers. Too many things have happened. However, concretely there is one way it could be handled. Drivers who are to get extra gas for driving to work, could be required to furnish a list of the people whom they guarantee to carry to work and which would fill the capacity of their car. They could not get the ration card unless they did. Then the Government could notify the people on the list that they expected them to ride in that car and to report failure to be picked up. Many reports and a change in the amount of gas.

I have no quarrel with the man who is willing to play the game. My hat is off to him, but I have the uncomfortable feeling that I am about to be taken for a ride by the fellow who will take advantage of something that appears to me to be wide open.

It might be a smart idea to put some people out on some artery like Sixteenth Street to count the empty seats in cars during one rush hour and then figure out how many bus loads that constitutes.

Da Capo

We have now become music-conscious concerning this war with the famous "V" for Victory, borrowed from the great theme of Beethoven's Fifth Symphony. Now that we have started such fine musical education with its deeper meaning, let us add a little more significance in this present period of war.

The initials D. C. in musical terms mean Da Capo, the translation of which means to "repeat from the beginning and continue to the end."

Added to the famous "V" it becomes appropriate as a symbol at this present time.

This war is the continuation of the last World War.

Now we repeat (D. C.) where we left off, determined to battle for Victory; and the center of this magnificent spirit is the Capital of the U. S. A., Washington, D. C.

So, for the name which our President has asked his people to select, I propose V . . .—D. C. to symbolize this war.

With all of the numerous alphabetical designations used already by the Government, this one would stand out above all of the others. It it very suitable. MARGUERITE V.

Population Control

We have read with interest in The Post, May 7, Mr. David Swing Felter's excellent letter in which he advocates a world union. Mr. Felter says that the American plan is a proven working model for all freedom-loving peoples and tells us that the next step for the United Nations is to apply the Fourteen Points of Woodrow Wilson and the noble generalities of the Atlantic Charter in a very detailed and definite plan for all peoples, especially India and China.

Let us see what obstacles we would run into if we attempted to apply the Atlantic Charter to India. India, as we all know, has a miserably low level of living. Want in India is widespread and the death rate is very high. The average length of life in India is about 26 years compared with an expectancy of life at birth in this country of more than 60 years. Yet notwithstanding this high death rate and low average length of life, the population of India increased 48 million during the past ten years. Forty-eight million people are more people than the entire population of France, or of Italy, or of England and Wales.

From this one example, and we might have used China as an example, it readily may be seen that any attempt to have "freedom from want" and to lower the death rate must be accompanied by an effective attempt to control and radically lower the birth rate of many of the countries of the world.

Mr. Felter has said that the American plan is a proven working model for all freedom-loving peoples. But it should be remembered that the density of population per square mile is about five times greater in Europe than in America, and furthermore America is the richest country in the world as regards natural resources and capital. Even with our relatively low density of population, as our population has increased we have found it more and more difficult to free our own people from want without increased regimentation. From this we might imagine how much regimentation there would be in this country if our population became as dense as it is in Europe or Asia. And let no one imagine that our population is not increasing. During the last few years our population has increased more than a million persons a year, or more than during our peak-prosperity years of 1928 and 1929.

We have mentioned the United States not to create any alarm, because we still have time to prevent the severe regimentation and miserable conditions of Europe and Asia if we act thoughtfully, but just to indicate that the subject of population deserves attention in the richest country in the world as well as in the poorest countries. The subject of population has been "the Great Tabu;" it has been the "blind spot in world politics;" and until we open our eyes to it, all of our plans, ideals, and hopes for freeing the world from want and war, will make little progress.

Going My Way?

Various angles of Washington's transportation problem have crossed my mind as I drive in to work from out in Maryland, and the one factor that looms largest in importance (except for beer trucks and other commercial vehicles obstructing traffic on busy streets during rush hours) has been the unoccupied space in private automobiles, especially going in in the morning. Two or three times, I have stopped while I was alone or had only one other passenger and picked up people who otherwise might wait 15 or 20 minutes for the next bus and brought them within at least a short distance of their destinations without going very far out of my own way.

This led to the formulation of a simple idea, which strikes me as a possible major solution to the transportation problem. My suggestion is as follows:

1. That the newspapers in Washington print up cards approximately 3 by 8 inches, and arm bands or badges of various colors, or some other insignia to be worn conspicuously on the clothing.

2. The cards to be printed with the words "Commerce," "War," "Navy," "Interior," "G. A. O.," et cetera, to be mounted on the lower right-hand corner of the windshield of cars with available passenger space.

3. The arm bands or badges to be labeled the same way or otherwise identified, so that drivers and pedestrians may get together on destinations at a glance.

The taxi drivers may object to this scheme, although I suspect they will not discover a serious slump in business as a result. It seems to me that it would help not only the traffic problem but metropolitan morale as well. What do you think?

Prevent Stagnation

There are literally thousands of people who will have their livelihood cut off by the curtailment of automobile traffic. Many of these people cannot be usefully employed in war work unless they are put on the Government payroll in a semi-charitable status. Where are the income taxes to come from if all the roadside stands, tourists camps, summer hotels, gasoline stations, etc., are put out of business?

This is not written to create discouragement. It is written because too many public officials seem to think that gasoline and tires for the war machine and war workers are all that is of importance. It is vitally important to keep small business moving. The production of synthetic rubber sufficient to take care of the civilian population, as well as the war needs, should be looked upon as a matter of first importance. Stagnation can be as great a menace as a hostile army.

Seat Bond Buyers

It seems to me that the baseball moguls are passing up a fine opportunity to stimulate war bond investing.

Why not fill some of those empty seats at the ball parks with war bond purchasers—offer free admission to anyone buying a bond at the gate. The space will be wasted anyway. Possibly a few admissions will be lost that way—but for every $1.10 the club loses in this manner, Uncle Sam will have $18.75 more with which to avenge the boys in Bataan and Corregidor.

Furthermore, it will be a fitting tribute to the President's support of the national pastime—even during wartime. HARRY TRAUB.

Corregidor Falls

So Corregidor has fallen.

To most Americans this is just another temporary reverse in this "slow-starting" war of ours. Just another outpost gone, that's all. But those who knew The Rock don't feel that way about it. The Rock had a personality.

It was The Rock where Army officers and their families gathered on the pleasant verandas of their quarters at taps every evening to watch the lights twinkle out in the mile-long concrete barracks across the parade ground.

It was The Rock where these same barracks were known as "double-deckers" instead of the conventional "two-storied."

It was The Rock where the three communities—Topside, Bottom-side and Middle-side—came to be thus named because the early garrisons of the insurrecto days employed pidgin-English speaking Chinese servants.

It was The Rock where the white crushed limestone causeway swept its winding way from Topside to Bottom-side bordered and overhung with tropical verdancy from which the odd twitters of queerly plumaged birds seemed indeed the Call of the East. At night when you strolled down that road the moon hung so low that it seemed three dimensional, and when a slithering but amazingly rapid-traveling dragon-like iguana rushed across your path you felt nervous, and when a shrill-voiced gecko started quavering its notes near you, you jumped.

It was The Rock where few cared to sleep after dawn. Cool breezes swept the heights then and birds raised such a din tha' reveille was but a gesture.

It was The Rock which held its traditional Spanish siesta hour. Sans clothing except underdrawers, the soldier became seminudist then, for the heat was terrific and the humidity almost stifling. From noon till 2 p. m. the soldier "hit the white elephant," for that is what he called his bunk, and Heaven help the recruit who so much as scraped a shoe across the floor.

It was The Rock that had its soldier stories of rough humor. There was the yarn, for instance, of "Khaki" Clark, top sergeant of the Sixteenth Company. For years "Khaki" made a fake reveille report to various officers of the day and got away with it until he was caught by the garrison adjutant out for a morning stroll. What officers on duty, as they stood in the center of the parade ground nearly a quarter of a mile away, understood the smartly saluting top soldier to say was the conventional "Sir, the Sixteenth Company present and accounted for!" but what "Khaki" actually did say was: "Go to h——ll, you Brass Hat ..... (Censored—Ed.).

Then, there was the story of "Fighting Bob" Evans, mess sergeant of the Fifteenth Company, who once, in the presence of that august official, kicked the departmental inspector general's dog through the screen door of his kitchen because the pooch had mistaken the sergeant's potato bin for a lamppost, and, shortly after that, the H. Q. clerk reported that the sergeant major had said that the adjutant had told him that the D. I. G. had preferred court-martial charges against Evans, but that the commanding general had torn them up, and had sharply advised the D. I. G. to leave his . . . .—(Censored.—Ed.) dog in quarters while making inspections of kitchens.

There is the story, too, of the gecko which inhabited the rocks near the reservoir and which for years at sundown had made exactly five calls until some smart young recruit made a wager with a sunshiner that it would not be ever thus, and had his pal slip out that evening and whack the reptile over the head with a stick after it had made but three.

On The Rock, any old-timer would bet, had he been so possessed, all the tea in China, or all the cotton in Georgia, that it would rain on the 31st of July, or that a typhoon would sweep the island within a week of the 21st of September.

Well, the old Rock has fallen.

It was to be expected, of course. For years the military has reluctantly advanced the opinion that it could not be held in a war with Japan. That was because our executives, our Congress and our public opinion refused to properly fortify the island or to maintain sufficient troops to defend the archipelago. We had economic problems and we thought civilization had outlived mass murder. A large Army and Navy?—bah! What nation would dare attack the United States? While we indulged these thoughts, The Rock stood there, a potential citadel against war-like trespass of Manila Bay, but denied the power it could have been given.

The Rock had 12-inch guns. It should have had sixteens. For the most part the batteries were on Topside. Like the guns of Singapore, they were positioned to repel naval attacks—poised to drop shells on enemy warships. They were of the disappearing type, but did not have bomb-proofs into which to retreat. They sank back into concrete "wells" which became death traps of flying mortar when struck by demolition bombs dropped by enemy aircraft. No funds were "available" to erect 9-inch batteries along the shores of Bottom-side to repel landing party transports which might crowd under the cliffs. No "appropriation" could be made to expand the puny air base on the flat tail of the island and no underground hangars were constructed despite the fact that The Rock's topography admirably lends itself to such action. There was no "dirig" of antiaircraft to sweep bombers from the skies. Our Nation, except the traditionally muzzled military, slept on, and it is in no bright dawn, a-twitter with cheerful song in which it has been wakened.

The Rock is gone.

Filthy little brown monkeys are chattering and hissing among its ruins.

But mark this. Twice before it fell, the Stars and Stripes were stripped from their mast at Topside by bombs, but were raised again by heroes under fire.

Will they fly from that mast again?

Ask the Regular Army man.

His answer will be profane but convincing.

"You're damned right, they will!"

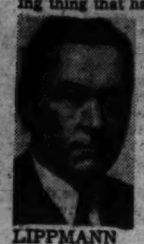
Admiral Land's Impossible Job

THE WEAKEST LINK in the war effort is, as every one knows, shipping. And the most discerning thing that has been said about the situation has, I believe, been said by Mr. Alfred Friendly of The Washington Post, a reporter who has done yeoman service in the long, and ultimately successful, struggle, to pass from business-as-usual to all-out production. Mr. Friendly said the other day that "the Maritime Commission has suffered from good publicity. Favorable comment on its activities have hurt it, and the war effort, just as much as" sharp and unfavorable and insistent criticism "has aided the Ordnance Department, the Office of Civilian Defense, and the War Production Board's industry branches."



LIPPMANN

In many essential respects shipping today resembles strongly the condition of production before the appointment of Mr. Donald Nelson and the decision to convert the automobile and other mechanical industries. Mr. Knudsen had done much. So has Admiral Land. Mr. Knudsen, like Admiral Land, was trusted and liked by every one, and few had the heart to criticize. Yet it was the fact that production could not move from a peace to a war basis until the old OPM had been reorganized. Today, though transportation on ships is our most serious problem, a reorganization of Admiral Land's authority will be needed if the problem is to be solved.

TO SAY this is no reflection on Admiral Land. It is to say only that he occupies a position and is carrying a responsibility which is beyond his powers, or that of any other man. "My job," he has said, "is ships, building them, operating them:" as Fortune magazine has pointed out, "Although technically under Mr. Nelson and the WPB, Land really is master on his own bridge, with undisputed powers over the merchant marine, from the laying of keels to the management of the trade routes."

The question is whether any one man can hope at one and the same time to build the ships and to operate them—to direct the greatest production program in the history of shipping and at the same time to direct the operation of ships on all the supply lines of this world-wide war. No one else has such a mixture of responsibilities, and in view of the importance of shipping, it is not only a very reasonable but a very urgent question why Admiral Land should have such a mixture of responsibilities.

NO ONE would think of asking Admiral King to operate the Navy and at the same time to direct naval construction. No one would think of asking Gen. Marshall to command the Army and also to manage the aircraft factories, the tank arsenals, and the ordnance plants. No one would think of asking Mr. Nelson to operate the bombers and the tanks that he builds. Why in the name of common sense should Admiral Land then be expected to build and to operate the merchant marine?

Is it not plain that ships ought to be built by someone who is a master of the art of production? And that in wartime ships ought to be operated by someone who sits with the directors of the highest war strategy, and makes his decisions accordingly—with full and responsible knowledge of the military and diplomatic circumstances? How can one man think about steel plates, and wage rates, and ship designing, and supplies, and crews, and also think about ships for Europe, ships for Africa, ships for Asia, ships for South America? It is no reflection on Admiral Land to say that his job is beyond him. It would be beyond anyone else.

HE HAS an impossible job, and if he is wise, he will advise the President to reorganize the job by placing the building of ships under a production manager, not necessarily a shipbuilder, who is responsible to Mr. Nelson—by placing the operation of ships under someone, not necessarily a shipping man who sits as an equal with those who have the strategical direction of the war.

ADMIRAL LAND has built and is building a good many ships. But he is not by his training or talent a Sorensen or a Keller or a Henry Kaiser—a master of the art of production. And until a man of that caliber and quality is in charge of the building of ships, we shall not be getting all the ships this country is capable of building. We shall not get the simplification of design, the simplification of method, the economy of materials and effort and of time which are achieved when a master producer takes charge, be it of the building of big bombers, or of tanks, or of anti-aircraft guns.

Admiral Land has also operated ships successfully. But the operation of ships in war is a very different thing from the operation of a merchant marine in peacetime. The controlling considerations in war are radically different, and though it would be difficult to prove this, there is little in the public record to indicate that Admiral Land thinks of giving the kind of concentrated attention to operating the merchant fleet as an instrument of war that Admiral King gives to operating the naval fleet. Yet the operation is in some ways more complicated, and ought to be directed with as much single-mindedness and with the same sense of its seriousness and primary importance.

SHIPPING IS one of the few large areas in which the spirit of business-as-usual still holds us back. It holds us back in the building of ships where adherence to traditional designs and traditional methods is a strong retarding factor. It holds us back in the use of ships where secondary considerations, and too low an estimate of what can be done, and too soft an estimate of what people will put up with to win the war, stand in the way of a drastic concentration of shipping for essential military purposes.

Yet the shipping problem can be mastered, as indeed it must be mastered. But first there will have to be a reorganization as drastic as that which liquidated the OPM and the policy of business-as-usual.

Dependent Support

By Janet R. Keith

Ottawa.

IF THE United States is to place two million men in its Army this year, family men will probably be called up before long. Men in their thirties with wives and children entirely dependent upon them stand a good chance of being drafted for military service soon, according to a recent announcement from Selective Service Headquarters. Provided, of course, that Congress passes an allotment bill to give financial support to dependents.

The question of determining what is a reasonable allowance for a soldier's family is not an easy one. But it must be decided quickly and wisely, or it will be a millstone around the neck of the war effort. Any nation must acknowledge that she has a two-fold responsibility toward her fighting man. He has a right to be well fed and well clothed, and sent into battle with the best weapons his country can produce. He has a right to know that his family is being well fed and well clothed, and that when he goes into battle his country is looking out for his wife and children.

A SYSTEM of granting allowances to dependents of military men has been operating in Canada since the outbreak of the war. It must be admitted that the system isn't all that it should be. There is some excuse, perhaps, for mistakes in judgment when a nation has to expand its army suddenly from 10,000 to 300,000 men. But if Canada had the whole thing to do over again, if she were asked to suggest a really satisfactory plan for taking care of dependents, many of her people would suggest a five-point program something like this.

Frst, be as generous in your allotment as a wealthy nation can afford to be. Soldiers' families shouldn't be paupers. It's hard to explain to youngsters why soldiers' children can't ever have new shoes like the war-factory workers' children across the street. It has been hard enough to explain to soldiers' wives in Canada why everyone in the country got a cost-of-living bonus—except them.

Under the measure now before the United States Congress, a wife with four children would get an allowance of $80 a month. Last fall a Canadian woman bringing up four little girls on a soldier's allowance of $79 a month wrote in a newspaper article:

"A family welfare worker told me that I must work miracles if I managed with what I had. It takes all my time. I could never make ends meet if I had to buy the children's clothes. It is hard enough to keep them in shoes. Most of the shoes that are given to me are thin-soled summer shoes that won't last through the winter. Last year it was difficult to get enough food, but this year with the higher costs it is almost impossible." It rather made one squirm to think of those four little girls in their cast-off shoes, especially when we were boasting about the solid leather and pure wool that went into our military uniforms.

SECOND, make your wife's basic allowance absolutely inviolate, no matter what the cost of living in her district, no matter how much money she is worth or how much she may be earning. It was brought out recently in the Canadian House of Commons that, whereas every enlisted man's wife is supposed to receive $35, wives living in the West Indies were getting only $20, and some Indian women living on reservations in Canada were getting as low as $10 and $15 a month. Even the minister of national defense was dissatisfied with this state of affairs. "I have always felt, he said, that these allowances for wives ought to be treated as inviolate. That is the practice which we have instructed the dependents' allowance board to follow, and it will be followed so far as I have anything to do with the dependents' allowance people. I consider that that amount is inviolate, whether a wife is worth a million dollars or nothing at all. That is $35 a month she can depend on, win, lose or draw, as some compensation for additional expenses because of the fact that her husband is away."

Third, make a definite allowance for every child in an enlisted man's family. Up until November of last year a Canadian soldier was supposed to have only two children. He was granted allowance for two, and if his wife had to stretch the money to look after 10, that was just too bad. Since November he has been given allowance for 4.

Undoubtedly the original idea was to keep men with more than two children from enlisting. But no attempt was made to keep men with large families out of the Army. There would be only one fair settlement: Either to grant an allowance for every child, or to refuse to take men with large families into the forces.

Third, make some provision for the medical care of soldiers' dependents. In Canada, where the allowance certainly hasn't been large enough to cover hospital bills, the situation has been most unsatisfactory. In some places the provinces have paid for medical care of dependents, in other places it has been considered a municipal matter. Certain small hospitals in towns near military camps are thousands of dollars in arrears because they have taken care of so many soldiers' dependents. There were loud protests when it was suggested in Parliament recently that the governments of the province, county and municipality should pay the full cost of "indigent" patients.

Should wives and dependents of soldiers be considered indigent cases, or do they deserve something better than ordinary charity treatment in a hospital? Many Canadian members of Parliament feel that the government should provide some form of state health insurance for all dependents of soldiers. The Minister of National Defense, while promising nothing, has referred the matter to the department of health and the department of finance.

Finally, make some provision for an authority to supplement allowances in "hardship" cases. It is inevitable that allowances will be at subsistence level, adequate enough (it is to be hoped) to provide food, shelter and clothing, but not by any means sufficient to take care of unforeseen disasters or special cases.

During the first two years of the war, Canada had no provision for supplementary allowances. Then a certain private who found that he couldn't support his wife and six children on his soldier's income called on the experts to help him balance his budget. The best budget the experts could devise required $25 a month more than the family was getting; and at that the budget included only immediate necessities, with no provision for fuel, boots, clothing or bedding.

The private's problem, with others like it, was submitted to Ottawa; and one of the results was the setting up of regional dependents' advisory committees all across Canada. Their purpose is to administer a fund quite separate from the dependents' allowance board, intended to supplement regular grants in cases of particular hardship, emergency or accident. The committees work in cooperation with the welfare agencies already operating in each community.

When Geoffrey May of Federal Security, made a request recently for flexible authority to supplement allowances, the suggestion was opposed in a Senate committee. Canada's experience has been that some sort of supplementary fund is definitely necessary, and it seems like a good idea to have it administered with the help of local social service organizations.

Breeding Ground For Crime

THIS HEADQUARTERS of the United Nations that are fighting international banditry throughout the world has an appalling record of local banditry within its own boundaries. In the single year of 1941 a total of 1224 robberies in Washington. Reports to the police show 1070 thefts involving more than $50 and nearly 8000 thefts involving less than that sum. In addition, Washington homes were entered by burglars whose loot was valued at $129,174. And 2616 automobiles were stolen. If this volume of crime were distributed over several cities the size of Washington, it would still leave each with an ugly record.

PUSEY

Once more the Washington Criminal Justice Association has brought this pathetic tale of banditry on the home front to public attention. To be sure, its report covering 1941 shows a slight decrease in the total volume of crime. But this is offset in large measure by a still sharper decline in the percentage of crimes solved. Some types of crime, moreover, are on the increase. Rape cases and other serious sex offenses ran far ahead of the comparable record for 1940.

Prostitution also flourishes in Washington on a scale that few American cities can match. Records at the jail show that 50 per cent of the prostitutes received are infected with venereal diseases. With soldiers flocking here to spend their leave, the brothels of the Capital vie with the Japs to see which can put the greatest number of Americans in uniform out of action.

AS A PEOPLE we have been traditionally nonchalant in our attitude toward crime. It may be particularly difficult to arouse any interest in the subject while we are engaged in a world-wide war. Yet the effect of that war is to put our civilization to a severe test. Actually we are matching our way of life with that of the totalitarian states. Certainly, while that great test of strength is being made, we cannot ignore this despicable stab in the back from criminal elements taking advantage of bungling law-enforcement systems.

There ought to be considerable interest, moreover, in protecting life and property in what has become the capital of the democratic world. The indisputable fact is that life and property are in greater danger from lawless elements here than in most American cities. For confirmation of that statement turn to the Uniform Crime Reports of the Department of Justice. You will find that Washington led all cities of comparable size in robbery last year. Indeed, the Capital had about ten times as many robberies as did either Buffalo or Milwaukee, more than four times as many as New Orleans and more than three times as many as Boston.

Last year also Washington had five times as many automobile thefts and four times as many grand larceny cases as Cleveland, which is a considerably larger city. Among the eleven cities with which Washington is roughly comparable in size, it stands first in the actual number of robberies and grand larceny cases, third in burglary and auto thefts, fourth in aggravated assaults, murder and nonnegligible manslaughter. That is a rather scummy record for the Capital of the United States and the headquarters of the United Nations.

NO ONE who knows Washington will suppose, however, that this poor showing is a matter of chance. It has a close relationship to the social conditions under which thousands of Washingtonians live. Warped lives are a direct result of crowding whole families into single rooms in foul slums. And warped lives are a direct step toward criminality. Then, too, when Washington children run afoul of the law, they are likely to be committed to training schools where there is no training worthy of the name. And when they grow up into hardened criminals they discover that the law-enforcement system of this voteless community gives the thief and the bandit excellent chances to escape punishment.

The Criminal Justice Association points out that in 1941 the police caught only four alleged criminals for every ten crimes reported to them. Many of those arrested escaped punishment in one way or another. Even those who admitted their guilt or were convicted by juries, had a good chance of being but on probation or of being released after serving a light sentence. One bandit pleaded guilty to crimes for which he could have been sent to prison for 150 years. But the judge fixed his sentences to run concurrently; so his period of incarceration will actually be from one to three years.

THERE HAVE been some encouraging improvements in the city's law enforcement machinery in the last few years. Major Kelly has partly reorganized the police force and greatly improved its morale. The District Attorney and the courts are handling cases much more promptly than they used to do, although there is still unconscionable delay in deciding appeals from sentences by the District Court. Numerous other improvements can be made, particularly in police detection and in the intelligent handling of prisoners once they are in the toils of the law. But even if some miracle should give voteless Washington model police and court systems, crime would probably continue on a large scale.

The most disconcerting fact is that this great international center is a breeding ground for crime. To elminate the criminal element we must eliminate the conditions that encourage crime. Decent housing, adequate public health measures, modern welfare institutions and intelligent care of juvenile delinquents all enter into the programs by which civilized nations turn their inhabitants away from predatory practices. But these have been, and continue to be, scandalously neglected in Washington. Thousands of serious crimes a year are the price that the city is still paying for a blundering and arbitrary political system which is not adjusted to meet the needs or respond to the will of the people it serves.

Roaches And Radios

The San Francisco Board of Health declares that radio sets breed cockroaches. Elmer Twitchell came forward today as an old friend of cockroaches and questioned this allegation. "It may have been true once," he declared, "but the commercials they are loading the air with today are too tough, even for the hardier roaches."

• • • •

"I used to have a couple of roaches in my set," continued Elmer, "but they can't stand the life any more. They are pretty tough roaches, too.

• • • •

"I am sure the commercials, which have been getting longer and longer as well as sillier and sillier, had much to do with it, but the last I saw of them they were getting fed up with a lot of the radio material, too.

• • • •

"The roaches that used to live in my radio set were very rugged and not too discriminating. I studied them quite carefully for a long time. They seemed to thrive on musical programs. And they liked some of the big radio shows. There was one famous radio comedian for whom they would go in a big way, but I was never certain whether this was because he was very good or very bad.

• • • •

"I noticed that they always ran out of the set and took refuge under the sink when some radio star came on. Women radio orators affected them in this way.

• • • •

"And they couldn't stand Congressmen on air forums very long without taking it on the lam for the old garbage bucket."

It was obvious that Elmer had made quite a study of cockroach life on the airwaves

• • • •

"Baby-voiced sister trios used to bother 'em a lot," he continued. "And they get tired of any song after it has been played 50 times the day. They ain't as hardy as humans in this respect.

• • • •

"One of the toughest cockroaches I ever knew turned over and gave up a few nights ago after listening to the gags on one of the most famous radio comedian's hours. He just couldn't stand 'em. And I know a couple of rugged ones that came out of my set so fast they broke all the tubes in their haste to get away from the long-winded plug for biscuits on a news broadcast.

• • • •

"What finally killed 'em, however, was getting too close to one of them war commentator's broadcasts. They went nuts trying to figure what hair oil had capitulated and whether the best thing to use for the scalp was Smolensk or Batavia.

The Federal Reserve Board has passed rules to curb installment buying further and to limit charge accounts to 40 days. That's just in case you go to a store and find that there's anything you can get.

But it seems to us we still hear voices on the radio saying "No money down, no cash payments, no obligations . . . just come in and state your needs."

• • • •

For Americans to be told they can't put off paying a bill for 40 days is going to prove quite a shock. We've all become accustomed to calling up the merchant and bawling him out if he even sent a bill inside of 60.

Under the new Government bans on iron and steel it is going to be pretty hard to buy any kind of a gadget pretty soon. So many people are making a habit of throwing them around, that we hope it means a shortage of monkey wrenches.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Howard University Answers Pegler

WHEN, on a recent date, I discussed the Chicago Defender and the Pittsburgh Courier, Negro weekly publications of wide circulation among the colored people, I naturally expected some unreasonable reaction along with some calm and intelligent discussion of the points of criticism.

PEGLER

The point of my essay, proved by citations from these two papers, was that they expressed a low cultural level which was not a compliment to the aspiring millions of colored Americans for whom and to whom they undertake to speak and that they insulted the intelligence and character of their Negro readers by publishing advertisements of various luck charms, good luck incense and books on "unusual love requirements and ancient sexual practices." I offered the opinion, also, that a Negro editor is lacking in sincerity and is imposing on his readers when he bids them be proud of their race but sells space to an advertiser offering a skin cream under the illusory and ignoble promise that it will turn them more or less white.

One colored man wrote that he had long wished that someone would "take a crack at the yellow journalism of Negro newspapers," adding, however, that he shuddered to think what their headlines would be, concerning me, next week.

"MANY LIBERAL Negroes are painfully aware of the harm caused by the confusing and misleading statements of these publications but there is little that can be done about it under the present Negro leadership," he said. "They'll twist your column around and say you advocated abolition of Negro newspapers."

Nobody has said exactly that but one communication from an organization called the March on Washington Movement, said my analysis "of the just grievances" of Negroes was "vicious" when the fact is that I did not analyze such grievances at all. This one also said I had linked Negroes in the same category as the Fascist and Communist groups although there was not a word in the whole discussion which even hinted at such a connection. This was a plain, deliberate lie, but our editor printed it nevertheless, so over-fair are we.

So my colored correspondent who said the column would be twisted clearly called the turn although I didn't need him to tell me. I got used to this sort of thing in writing of criminals and dictators in the union racket, every factual, provable word of which has been airly ignored by the culprits who have constantly howled "labor baiter" to divert attention from their guilt.

BUT I HAVE been shocked to receive a press release from Howard University in Washington which is supposed to be a center of Negro intelligence upholding the Defender and the Courier in the practices cited on the pathetic ground that they are "heroic defenders" of the colored people.

"He," meaning me, says this press release from the university, "gave no basic reasons why Negro newspapers are 'inferior' to white publications," and says these reasons can be traced to the segregated place of the Negro. But it is my point that these papers tend to secure that segregation by exploiting a Negro world far apart from the whole community of the United States and that the Negro press, in its pride of race, should be careful always of its racial mission to express the highest qualities of the colored people, not the lowest, in its own particular field, which is journalism. It would be a pathetic admission by Howard University that these two papers do represent the best ability of colored men in journalism, because, if we are arguing from the basis of my professional opinion, they are very inferior to the standard white journalism. I hope Howard does not say that the standard presented by the Defender and the Courier is the best the colored people can produce and I know it isn't, myself. This standard is just trash and is imitative, and in a crude way, of all that is discreditable or least admirable in the white press.

The university even says the Negro editor must stoop to "trite and detestable matter" by way of appealing to the Negro masses so as to acquire power and influence among those masses "who need his teachings most," which strikes me as an argument for deliberate degradation of the readership by clever men who know better so that the clever men may use the masses according to their own versatile ethics and personal ambitions.

The university further explains that these papers are "big business" and then says that this big business must resort to "sordid exploitation" of the credulity of its mass clientele so that it may live to befriend them. At this point I have to ask myself whether Howard University is for the colored man or against him, respects his intelligence or regards him as a very low-grade person. The argument doesn't make the university's position quite clear to me.

Van Duzer Made Chief Of Defense Transportation

District Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer was appointed Administrator of Defense Transportation for metropolitan Washington, the Commissioners announced last night.

Van Duzer's appointment was made at the request of national Defense Transportation Chief Joseph B. Eastman, who asked that an administrator be named to cooperate in putting into effect a national program designed to prevent any breakdown in the transportation of war workers to and from their places of employment.

As defense transportation administrator, Van Duzer will have greatly increased responsibilities and powers, as he will regulate not only the movement of vehicles, but the coordination of all kinds of private and mass transportation.

He will work in conjunction with the Highway Advisory Committee to the War Department.

This committee, which has been working for some months on such problems as the routing of troops through Washingtno, consists of Assistant Traffic Director M. O. Eldridge, chairman; F. W. Lovejoy of the Public Roads Administration, executive secretary, Traffic Inspector Arthur E. Miller, and District Highway Engineer J. R. Robertson.

In asking for a Defense Transportation Administrator for the District, to work with the National and State highway advisory committees, Eastman said:

"Any breakdown in the local transportation facilities, including the movement of automobiles for war workers, would seriously impair the war production effort. Immediate steps must be taken for the continued operation of all facilities for war production and the maintenance of essential civilian activities."

The Board of Trade's Traffic Committee at its weekly meeting yesterday adopted a motion that the advisory committee to the War Department be the agency to administer the program, and that it be empowered to carry out the job.

Defend Nation With Both Guns And Votes, Willkie Asserts

By the Associated Press

Schenectady, N. Y., May 11.—To make sure this war is not "just another season of blood-letting," Wendell L. Willkie implored Union College graduates today to "defend your country not only with your guns but by your votes."

Speaking to a class of 166 seniors, the 1940 Republican Presidential candidate declared in a prepared address "leaders without convictions who were thinking in terms of group vote catching" betrayed the Nation after the last war.

"As citizens, you may be called on to give your very lives to preserve your country's freedom," he said. "For God's sake, elect to important office men who will not make a mockery of that sacrifice."

"Obvious Weakness"

Willkie called "the lac kof any continuity in our foreign policy" the "most obvious weakness" in the country's history. Neither major political party has followed "a stable or consistent program" of international cooperation in the last 45 years, he asserted.

"If we were to say that Republican leadership destroyed the League of Nations in 1920," he said, "we must add that it was Democratic leadership that broke up the London economic conference in 1933."

The American people were confused on the treaty after the last war, and "many of their leaders talked two ways," Willkie continued. Party platforms were ambiguous, and not until after he was elected did President Warren G. Harding speak "frankly of the league as 'now deceased'."

Isolationism Deplored

"I do not want to see that same thing happen again. If our isolation after the last war was a contributing factor to the present war and the economic instability of the past 20 years—and it seems plain that it was—a withdrawal from the problems and responsibilities of the world after this war would be sheer disaster.

"We must then use the full force of our influence and enlightenment as a nation to plan and establish continuing agencies under which a new world may develop—a world worth the fight and sacrifice we have made for it."

Cromwell Urges Korea Rebels Be Recognized

James H. R. Cromwell, former American Minister to Canada, yesterday told Secretary of State Hull that the 23 million people of Japanese-hold Korea are ripe for revolution and urged immediate American recognition of the de facto government of the Republic of Korea, now at Chungking.

Cromwell, in a letter to Hullfi said that the War Department, the Navy Department and the Office of the Coordinator of Information, headed by Col. William J. Donovan, "are greatly interested in the possibilities of a revolution in Korea and ample funds for financing revolutionary activity are obtainable."

Swedish Public Favors Curbing Extremist Parties

Agitation has been carried on in Sweden for many months to abolish extremist political parties, notably the Swedish Communist Party and the Swedish Nazi Party. The following report by the newly organized Swedish Gallup Poll shows what the people of Sweden think should be done about the situation.

Special to The Washington Post.

The people of Sweden, in a virtual no-man's-land of World War II, are inclined to favor suppression of all political extremists, both rightist and leftist, according to a survey made by the recently organized Swedish Institute of Public Opinion, the Gallup Poll of Sweden.

The two extremist parties are the Swedish National Socialists (Nazis) and the Swedish Communist Party. The survey showed that 42 per cent of the Swedish people would favor prohibition of both parties. Another 10 per cent would abolish the National Socialist Party only, and 10 per cent would suppress only the Communist Party.

The remainder, 38 per cent of the people, are opposed to an anti-extremist law, or are undecided on the question, the poll shows.

War Costs Reach Rate of Two-Fifths Of U. S. Income

Military expenditures have now reached the rate of more than two-fifths of the national income, a War Production Board analysis revealed yesterday.

Donald M. Nelson, WPB chairman, disclosed that April expenditures for war purposes were $3,421,000,000, or more than 400 million dollars in excess of the March figure. This compares with an estimated national income of about 100 billion dollars annually.

Since actual production figures are secret, the data on expenditures, which are a rough measure of deliveries of military items, are the closest available guage of armament progress.

The April rate, four times as high as that of April last year and nearly double that of last November, the month before Pearl Harbor, was cited by Nelson as data from which "Americans can draw much satisfaction" in guaging war production.

World Fellowship

Miss Josephine Brown, recently returned from rural China and expert on the Chinese Industrial Cooperatives, will be guest speaker at the Y. W. C. A. World Fellowship Committee's meeting at the Seventeenth and K Streets building tomorrow at 4 o'clock. The meeting is open to the public.

Miss Brown made a special survey of 76 branches of the Chinese Industrial Cooperatives, traveling for four months, part of the time on blacked-out trains, in 11 of China's provinces, from Loyang and Lanchow to Kinming on the Burma Road.

As executive secretary for the rural work of the Y. W. C. A. in China for 11 years, Miss Brown had wide contact with the cooperatives. With her knowledge of Chinese, together with a letter from Dr. H. H. Kung, minister of finance, who is keenly interested in the Chinese Industrial Cooperatives, it was possible for her to obtain behindscene insight into the magnificent struggle of China's common people. Dr. Kung's letter permitted its bearer to travel to the far parts of China and to bring back tales that are the envy of many a veteran journalist.

Miss Brown will be in Washington throughout this week canvassing for the benefit of the Chinese Industrial Cooperatives as part of the United China Relief Nationwide campaign.

Mary E. Switzer, Assistant to Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt, will be the guest tonight of the "Supper at Six" Club at the Jewish Community Center. Miss Switzer will discuss the subject of "Making an Adjustment to Life in a New Community."

The "Supper at Six" Club is an organization whose purpose is to welcome to Washington young women who have come to work for the Government. Miss Ruth Green, director of activities at the Jewish Community Center, is inviting all newcomers to attend the supper and make friends. A committee headed by Lila Orlean has arranged for hostesses to greet those who are new to the group, has chosen songs for community singing, planned the menu and made other arrangements connected with the supper.

Although the "Supper at Six" Club has had only one meeting so far, the members are very enthusiastic about the club and its activities. The following girls have volunteered to serve on a housing committee which will help the women's committee for the Washington USO Council in its work: Rosetta Batten, Eve Glazer, Lillian Goldenberg, Sarah Louise Grodsky, Edith Hirschowitz, Yetta Lipschultz, Ruth Mordes, Lillian Pailet, Edna Rosenbaum, Ada Stein and Blanche Sussman.

Girls who have volunteered their services as recreation leaders for children's clubs are Rosetta Batten, Eve Glazer, Lillian Goldenberg and Rhoda Umansky.

The club will hold a special meeting the evening of May 25 in honor of Poetry Week. The members are invited to bring guests and all members are asked to take part. Each of the club's poets will read one of their poems. Refreshments will be served. Mrs. Leila Marshall is in charge. The hostesses are Miss Ruth A. Donn, Miss Maud Hutcheson and Miss Leila Green.

Benefit Tea Planned in Garden Of Mrs. Flannery

On Tuesday, May 26, the beautiful garden of Mrs. John Spaulding Flannery, at 2411 California Street, will be open for a "silver tea" for the benefit of the missionary work of the Church of England. The woman's auxiliary of the Episcopal Church in the diocese of Washington, which is joining with Episcopalian groups all over the country in an effort to raise $300,000 for the support of British Missions, is giving the tea. Feeling strongly that any such gesture of friendship between the people of this country and Great Britain is of great value at this time, Episcopal women in and around Washington are planning enthusiastically for the event.

The committee in charge of the tea has as its chairman Mrs. Walter G. Dunlop. Other members are Mrs. Albert Atwood, Mrs. William H. Van Benschoten and Mrs. Theodore O. Wedel.

Prado Begins Tour of U. S. Arms Centers

President Manuel Prado of Peru left Washington last night for a tour of the Nation's great munitions centers, after a historic appearance yesterday on Capitol Hill, where he renewed his country' pledge of adherence to the international policy of President Roosevelt.

The first President of any foreign country ever to address the United States Congress, President Prado, in separate speeches to the House and Senate, promised Peru's unstained cooperation as a "factor of real importance in the solution of the common problems of the defense of our continent."

To the common cause of the Americas, he said, his country stands ready to furnish "without reservations the great possibilities that its territory offers in its rich virgin forests, in its majestic mountain ranges enclosing great mineral and hydroelectrical wealth, in its fertile valleys, in its copious rivers, in its mild climate and in the proverbial tranquillity of the ocean along its shores."

Addresses Congress in English

President Prado delivered his address in English, slowly and painfully struggling to overcome his natural Spanish accent. Members of both houses listened intently, frequently interrupted with applause and saluted each entrance and exit with standing ovations. Spanish-speaking legislators later conversed with him in his native tongue, an experience which seemed to delight him.

Vice President Wallace and Speaker Rayburn introduced him to Senate and House respectively, each referring to him as the chief executive of a "friendly republic."

After the speeches, which were for the most part similar, leaders in each House formed reception lines and the legislators filed by for personal introductions to the first foreign dignitary to address the United States Congress since the stirring speech of Prime Minister Winston Churchill before a joint session last winter.

15th Foreign Official in History

President Prado was the fifteenth foreign official to carry a message into either or both Houses of Congress. The first was David Kalakaua, King of the Hawaiian Islands, who appeared before a joint session December 18, 1874, but whose speech was read by subordinate, because the King was suffering from a severe cold.

Peru, in common with all the American Nations whose birthright is freedom, "has endeavored to render invariable homage to the rights of all peoples to decide, each, their own destiny, and to regulate their relations on the basis of mutual respect, whatever their differences of material might," Mr. Prado declared.

America, he said, "constitutes an immovable barrier" against any attempt to "annul" more than a century of effort in behalf of liberty. In order that this mission may be fulfilled, he stated, it was essential that the nations of America, "rising above all narrow interest, should form a united and indissoluble front, identified by the cult of the same ideal and by the same indestructible faith in the conquest of a common destiny."

"A new economic and social policy is being crystallized," he said, "which will guide in its main directions the relations of the people of this hemisphere, within a concept that is entirely humane, constructive and guarantor of the intangibility of its democratic institutions and its independence."

The world crisis, he added, has compelled the Americas "to become integrated spiritually and materially as a great geographic unity." He warned that:

"If the war is followed by mystification, misery and confusion, then the blood, sweat and tears of today will have been shed in vain."

Thieves Include Tire and Battery In Weekend Haul

Petty larcenists apparently were grabbing everything not nailed down or too square to roll away over the weekend. Thefts reported to police yesterday ranged from personal letters to heirloom handiwork and included in the hauls were auto tires, batteries and other accessories whose loss priorities-ridden car owners may dispute being petty.

Clarence J. Meyers, 4108 Eighth Street Northwest, reported that his car was stripped of a tire, tube and wheel some time during the night. Edward Engelman, 4700 Connecticut Avenue Northwest, had the battery lifted from his car, but the thieves considerably left an old battery in place of the one taken.

Sometime Monday morning, according to occupants of an apartment house at 343 Raleigh Street Southeast, prowlers made off with two trunks from the storage basement. One belonging to Hattie Herwitz, police reports state, contained women's clothing, letters and papers, while an Army trunk belonging to Lieut. Lawrence Sheetz contained a handwoven blanket owned by Sheetz's family since 1864, and other personal possessions.

U.S.O. Council May Act Today On Community War Fund

With the USO's 32-million-dollar war fund campaign under way, the council of the Washington unit was scheduled to meet at 10:30 o'clock this morning to decide whether it would pitch in with the Board of Trade and the Community Chest for a combined Community War Fund.

Council members sounded out on which campaign they would join, expressed informally the opinion that the local USO chapter would tie up with the Washington Community War Fund. No plans have been made for cooperation with the USO's drive, which covers 5000 communities in 48 States.

Indorsement of the Community War Fund would complete the combination in the District of every financial appeal based on war needs.

Last Friday's meeting, called by the Board of Trade and District Commissioner John Russell Young, launched preliminary plans for the incorporation into one of all local drives basing their appeal on the war emergency.

At the meeting more than 250 business and civic leaders approved the plan for a Community War Fund in 1943 and unanimously instructed Commissioner Young to name "a general committee to perfect a permanent organization for the establishment of the fund."

WPB Will Set Up 13 Regional Offices in Decentralization Plan

Administrative decentralization of the war effort was given a boost last night with issuance of roders and regulations officially creating 13 regional offices of the War Production Board andd placing broad authority in the regional directors.

In effect, the action by WPB Chairman Donald M. Nelson will set up "13 little WPB's," officials said, and each director will be Nelson's representative in his area. The intention is to keep policy and planning work in the Capital, it was announced, but to place operations out in the field where the production lines are actually turning out guns, planes and munitions.

The policy of decentralization will be urther developed, the regulations stated, to the end that, "so far as practicable, the work of the War Production Board in Washington shall center in policy determination, program planning, the institution of major procedures and general coordination, while the day-to-day operations shall be conducted through the regional offices."

It is intended that businessmen and industrialists may deal as much as possible henceforth with the field offices instead of traveling or writing to Washington.

At the head of the regional offices will be L. Edward Scriven of Evanston, Ill., with the rank of deputy chief of WPB's division of industry operations. Scriven has been head of the bureau of field operations, which is disbanded in the new setup.

The regional offices, locations of which were announced previously, are at Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Atlanta, Cleveland, Chicago, Kansas City, Dallas, Denver, San Francisco, Detroit, Minneapolis and Seattle. Six of the directors have been appointed. They are Orville H. Bullitt in Philadelphia, Ernest Kanzler in Detroit, Frank H. Neely in Atlanta, John C. Virden in Cleveland, Joseph L. Overlock in Chicago and Walter H. Wheeler in Boston.

Correction

To become a candidate for officer's training school, a soldier must be an American citizen but not necessarily American born, it was pointed out last night by Ham Fisher, creator of the Joe Palooka comic strip.

In listing the requirements in the strip published in The Post yesterday, Fisher inadvertently said candidates must be American-born citizens.

Milk Dealers Plead for Public Patience With Day Deliveries

As Washington went through its first day of day-time delivery, milk dealers begged the public to be patient while plans were worked out to make the deliveries as satisfactory as the circumstances permit.

"You've got to remember there's a war on and all of us have to do what the Government thinks best," was the plea given dissatisfied customers who called in to cancel their milk accounts because of the change in hours.

Housewives do not present so much of a problem, since the double delivery most dairies supplied on Sunday assured the customers of cream for their Monday morning coffee, and from then on it should be a matter only of adjustment.

the Washington summer sun would are working all day afford the greatest concern to the dairies. While they believe that late afternoon deliveries would leave the milk standing on the doorstep not much longer than the old early morning custom, no milkman can guarantee that a couple of hours in

The homes where all the occupants not hasten its souring.

Apartment dwellers are a little better off, since it is possible to make arrangements to have the milk left in the basement all day. This is already in effect in a great many apartment houses, according to Edgar Brawner, president of the Chestnut Farms Chevy Chase Dairy.

"We believe we can work out some plan to deliver the milk as satisfactorily as was formerly done," Brawner said. "We urge people not to cancel their accounts right away, but to give us a few days trial. After all, it's as new to us as it is to them."

Brawner said that although he believed the alternate day delivery was coming, he had to date received no notification. He doubted that this would inconvenience people as much as the initial change to day-time service.

D. C. Hospitals To Hold Open House Today

Today is National Hospital Day—the 122d anniversary of the birth of Florence Nightingale, the "Lady With the Lamp," who is famed for military nursing in the Crimean War.

In celebration, Washington's hospitals will open their doors to the public all day with an invitation "to come in and get acquainted," it was announced by Miss Mattie M. Gibson, superintendent of Children's Hospital and chairman of the National Day Committee for Washington.

"A most important thing to remember," Miss Gibson pointed out, "is that National Hospital Day is not a donation day. The hospitals merely wish to see old friends and make new ones.

"It is a special opportunity for the public to visit these important community institutions to learn something of their service, their facilities, their purposes, and their aspirations."

Special programs have been arranged at each of the District's hospitals. At Children's Hospital, Thirteenth and W Streets Northwest, tea will be served to visitors in the afternoon.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Wife's Complacent Neglect of Devoted Husband Was Cured When Brilliant, Attractive Woman Friend Set Out to Win Him; She's Grateful for Experience

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I feel I must protest your reply of May 6 to "Man Reader." He explains that after years of exceedingly happy marriage, his wife seems perfectly content, nowadays, with a completely unemotional relationship, and asks whether an "application of jealousy" would cure her polite indifference to him. You advise against "a tantalizing display of interest in another woman;"—saying it would only worsen his standing with her. You tell him, "If the problem cannot be solved within the framework of scrupulous fidelity, there is no cure."

My experience proves otherwise. Some years ago, I felt and behaved exactly as "Man Reader's" wife does today. It is generally agreed that American women are inordinately spoiled, with the result that they take for granted an endless amount of protective devotion; assuming it will always be theirs, whether or not they honestly earn it. It was so in my case. I imagine it is equally true of this woman.

I was an only child, spoiled by my parents and later by my devoted husband and men in general. My husband has great strength of character; a generous, forceful personality and sterling qualities of mind and heart. His fidelity to me was such that he seemed not to know there were other women in the world. Few women are wise enough to cherish such tribute at its true value,—as a rare gift which speaks more eloquently of the giver's than the recipient's worth.

Just as our relationship had dwindled nearly to the point described by "Man Reader,"—due entirely to my complacency,—one of my most brilliant and attractive women friends made a dead set for my husband. He, too, is brilliant and I am not. At first, he did not realize the woman's intentions, although they were plain enough to others. I had always thought I would welcome such a situation,—as moderating the intensity of his devotion to me; because, due to my partial "frigidity," the emotional side of marriage had never concerned me very much.

But how unaccountable women are! I became absolutely primitive. One moment I would think that my heart (which I had believed so cold) would break; and the next, I could have murdered my friend in cold blood. I could not meet the situation with poise or detachment. Nor could I discuss it analytically. I simply broke off my friendship with the woman; and my husband,—although he disapproved my action, which he thought unduly emphasized a light flirtation that had meant nothing to him,—loyally followed suit, and saw no more of the designing lady.

I have been grateful ever since for the experience. Had I kept on as I was going, I would undoubtedly have lost my husband's love,—the value of which I never realized until I saw someone trying to steal it. Therefore, my advice to "Man Reader" is to philander a little; pretending to lose interest in his wife. I believe it will provide the quick cure of her "indifference." Sincerely,

CONSTANT WIFE.

Story Really Proves Value of Constancy

DEAR C. W.: I doubt that your experience really does prove what you contend. Supposing your husband had turned fretfully away from your coolness and deliberately instigated a "triangle" flirtation or intrigue—would that development have quickened your love of him a hundredfold? I am sure it would not. It is one thing for a dissatisfied husband to philander; and another thing entirely for a neglected husband to find himself suddenly confronted with the proposition of what to do about a fascinating "other woman's" ardent interest in him.

Had your husband been the flagrant aggressor in the instance described, or even a ready accomplice, he would have become the butt of that primitive upsurge of heartsick anger you experienced. As it happened, fortunately, the woman's behavior drew your fire. You were able to see her as "the villain of the piece;" and could unleash upon her the inevitable emotions of hostility and resentment the situation engendered in your breast.

The spectacle of a dangerously attractive woman candidly coveting your husband naturally would lend his stock kiting in your eyes. And when you found it possible, with his indulgent cooperation, to put her to rout, it was easy to cherish him wholeheartedly, with a fillip of appreciation never felt before. But the aftermath of that frightening flirtation would have been vastly different if he had casually left you in the ignominious position of having to scheme and tussle to reclaim his attention. Had that been the story, the essence of a once strongly knit relationship would have been subtly and permanently altered for the worse. Involuntary cynicism on the part of both would have entered in, to mock and betray forevermore your most sincere mutual efforts to grow together again.

So, if "Man Reader" means what he says, in declaring he wishes "to cling fast to all that has been good in his marriage," he will take my advice, in preference to yours; and will follow your husband's example of constancy during trying days. For, after all, your husband's disposition to be faithful to you was a bigger factor in saving your marriage than the "great awakening" you underwent. Few men could match the unhesitating, thoroughgoing loyalty he showed,—in abruptly terminating a stimulating friendship with a brilliant, attractive and ardently interested woman, in order to set you free of jealous fears that stemmed primarily from your bad conscience. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Flowers Expected to Fade From Decorative Fabrics

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

FLOWERS on the stem may probably have to give some ground to vegetables for defense, but it is flowers on the bolt that are facing really serious war curtailment. The decorative fabric world is waiting the final version of the Government's ruling about printing patterns for next season's line of chintzes, sateens, cretonnes.

Right now the talk is that printed fabrics may only have 40 per cent of their surface colored—the reason being the need to save dye. That's going to put some pretty stringent limitations on types of fabrics popular for furniture covers. So it looks as though slip covers of the future won't splash flowers around with such lavish profligacy as they have in the past and either natural or white backgrounds will probably be the rule. About the only popular type of pattern that won't be affected are those big single cabbage rose patterns spattered sparsely on white grounds—they're smart and already conform to the 40 per cent color ruling. Most other patterns will have to trim their sails drastically.

Future Restrictions

Well, that's just a forewarning of future restrictions. The present season has a blooming abundance of lovely patterned fabrics on hand, riotous flowered designs as well as stripes, both bold and demure, along with fabrics in solid colors and nonobjective patterns. So like a lot of drastic changes that are going on in our world today, we won't feel the impact of this curtailment at once because the spring lines are already complete and there's plenty for everybody but the hoarders.

New Trend

Next fall will tell another story, but with the speed of change these days that's too far off to be worrying about such matters as the roses on sofas. Most of us have enough worries as of today.

Big bold patterns, bright clear colors are everywhere seen in fabrics for furniture coverings. And stripes are smart and fresh and courageous looking. There's quite a trend toward the combining of plain and figured fabrics in various ways—often the body of the cover will be plain, the flounce figured. Or else the whole cover will be plain with an appliqued motif cut from a flowered design—both good ideas for rationing flowered designs so that they will go further.

Furniture covers this spring should be planned with long-term service in view—that means fabrics that are stout of weave, fast of color, and preshrunk.

Nurses' Aide Work Called Good Cure for Bad Nerves

By Ida Jean Kain

What this country needs right now is plenty of volunteer nurses' aides. Greater New York alone wants 10,000. And the national quota for the next year is set at 100,000. This may be your chance to get into the war.

The age limit for an aide is 18 to 50. I asked Mrs. William A. Rothholz, director of the Nurses Aid Service for the Red Cross in New York, to tell me what age group makes the best aides. She is inclined to believe that, as a rule, the women of 30 to 45 do best in this work. "Their children are old enough to be out of the way and they are glad to have something to do."

There is plenty to do. The course of training is hard enough and interesting enough to take your mind off your nerves. Just as a preliminary, you spend 35 honurs receiving instruction from an A. R. C. supervisor. Then you put what you have learned into practice at some cooperating hospital.

Hospital Requirement

The minimum requirement in the hospital is 14 hours per week. You have the choice of putting in two full days or five mornings. The full course adds up to 80 hours.

You always work under supervision. And you are restricted to such nonprofessional tasks as making beds and bathing patients. But convalescents are given more attention than ordinarily, and the graduate nurses are released for more important work.

In New York City the aides serve with the mobile blood bank units and with blood donor services. This means they are helping out with one of the most important jobs connected with national defense.

To become an aide you must meet certain requirements. For example, you must pass a thorough physical examination—they want you to be able to stand up under a crisis, not keeling over in a faint when you're needed. Also, you must have a high school education and you must be a citizen either of the United States or of a friendly country.

Give Time Generously

In addition, you have to be able to put in plenty of time should the necessity arise. The national headquarters states in a bulletin that "aides will be needed on the home front as much as elsewhere, but they must be prepared to give generously of their time during a period of great need."

You get a uniform—an attractive nurse's frock of soft blue denim, which is extremely becoming to most aides. You also get a pin to wear on your collar, and an Office of Civilian Defense insignia for the sleeve.

And that's all. No pay. But the women who have enrolled for the corps seem to be getting so much satisfaction out of doing something they know o be worth while that this is rapidly becoming one of the most popular branches of defense work. Perhaps it is your chance to get into the war.

Olney Theater Restaurant Offers Favorite Foods

KEEP 'EM frying! That will certainly be the cry concerning the crisp, tender fried chicken that will be served in the new dining room at Steve Cochran's Olney Theater, Olney, Md., to guests this summer.

At a "curtain raiser' luncheon yesterday, Mr. Cochran, owner of the "straw hat" theater, gave the press a preview of the delicious food to be served in his new dining room to theater-goers this summer.

Mr. Cochran is of the opinion that many persons are—no party is a real party without fried chicken. So 9-week old chickens, fried to a tenderness and crispness, was one of the delightful dishes included on the menu. The invigorating air of the country had put keen edges on the guests' appetites, but these edges vanished when the following menu was served:

Luncheon Menu

Raspberry Sherbet With Fresh Fruit
Fried Chicken
Mashed Sweet Potatoes
Buttered Peas Tomato Salad
Cottage Cheese Hot Rolls
Cherry a la Mode Coffeffe

Fresh cherries will soon be in season. They make a favorite dessert as known by the song, "Can She Bake a Cherry Pie?" That is not only the question of the young man asking if his lady love can qualify as a cook, but it is one that many persons ask enthusiastically. If you don't want to wait until fresh cherries come along, the sour canned ones also make a delicious pie. The recipe for making a 9-inch pie follows:

Cherry Pie—Line pie plate with pastry. Put in 2½ cups canned, stoned cherries. Mix ¾ cup cherry juice, 2 tablespoons sugar, or more if necessary, 2½ tablespoons quick-cooking tapioca, few grains salt and pour over cherries. Dot with butter. Put on top crust. Bind. Place pie in hot oven, 450 degrees, on the bottom of the oven, for 10 minutes. Then move to middle shelf, reduce heat to moderate, 350 degrees, and bake 40 minutes or until done. If upper crust browns too quickly, cover with paper.

Clothes Patching Made Easier

Mending headaches often result as Mrs. Thrifty Housewife sorts the weekly laundry. When she finds a tear in the very middle of a tablecloth, a rip in a sheet, a worn spot on dad's shirt where the point of the collar rubs, and perhaps a three-corner tear in a favorite housedress that means doing patchwork.

These tears need no longer be a problem for there is a new resin-treated material on the market that makes mending possible right along with the family ironing. Just take a piece of the mending material, cut to size, lay it under the torn place, press it for a few seconds with a hot iron, let it cool—and the job's done.

That means there are no more tedious long darning jobs, no unsightly patches, no expensive reweaving on the household linens. Just a quick pressing job, and your mending is done. According to Consumer's Division of the OPA, this patch is almost invisible. Another point of interest is that the patched item will withstand a lot of laundering—both washing and ironing.

But patching washable household cottons and linens is not its only use. Holes in pants, raincoats and other colored, heavy fabric materials can also be repaired if a spare piece of patch material is available. Often the piece can be taken from a concealed part of the article to be mended. The process is simple. In order that the new piece will fit exactly into the worn place, cut through both layers at the same time, preferably with a sharp razor blade. Set the cut-out patch into the hole into which it fits. Then fasten it permanently into place by a piece of mending material cut somewhat larger than the patch and applied from the reverse side. Cement it into place with your hot iron.

This mending material, technically known as "thermoplastic resin," costs so little than an ordinary patch can be made for less than one cent. And that is a help to be considered in these days when a shortage of textiles makes it necessar to use each article as long as possible and aid in national conservation.

Two Brilliant Embassy Parties of Past Weekend Still Washington Society's Chief Topic of Talk

FOR MONTHS Washington will be talking about two brilliant parties that accented the calendar the past weekend. One of the largest fetes of the season was the wedding reception and luncheon on Saturday at the Venezuelan Embassy, following the wedding of Maria Teresa Escalante and Arturo Bustamante. Smaller, but also glittering with stellar personalities was the reception that evening at the Peruvian Embassy in honor of the President of Peru, Dr. Manuel Prado, whose visit to Washington drew to a close yesterday.

Alike only in that you saw many of the same guests at both, the parties were actually as different in most respects as would be possible in two South American Embassies. Take the settings, for instance. Definitely twentieth century in inspiration is the sparkling white and silver embassy over which flies the flag of Venezuela. Glittering metal outlines the long narrow building, with its spacious salons, magnificent glass doors that open onto the terrace, and modern furnishings. By contrast, just as definitely Victorian is the red brick mansion that served for years as the Embassy of Peru. There, the windowless drawing room has red brocaded walls, a thick red carpet, plush covered sofas and gold-framed pictures, encased in glass.

The Venezuelan reception featured one of the loviest brides I have ever seen; while the first South American President ever to visit the United States during his term of office ran away with the spotlight at the Peruvian Embassy.

Younger Set at Venezuelan Embassy

Chiefs of missions, high-ranking United States officials, and members of residential society were liberally scattered through both companies, but at the Venezuelan Embassy, I saw many more members of the younger set. "Old" Washington (and I'm not referring to age) was more in evidence at the Peruvian Embassy. "And why not? The Peruvian Ambassador is practically a cave-dweller himself," observed one guest.

But back to the party at the Venezuelan Embassy. Here are a few highlights: A receiving line, headed by the Ambassador and Senora de Escalante, formed a crescent in the large drawing room. The bride, who looked as if she had stepped out of a fashion magazine, her handsome husband, and the bridesmaids, all in hyacinth blue, stood in line, smiled and shook hands with several hundred guests.

Senorita Elena Alamo Ybarra, cousin of the bride, who came up from Caracas to serve as maid of honor, was a dream, in a cloud of ruffled white organdy and a snatch of a hat to match titled becomingly on her pretty head . . . I never can tell which is which when I see the two attractive Norris girls, but I must say they were pretty in their blue frocks; and the Teetz Hermoso sisters, too; and all the others . . . But definitely one of the lovliest persons there was the bride's mother, whose softly draped white frock, splashed with green figures outlined in green and crimson sequins was as fashion-high as anything you can imagine

When the last guest had been greeted and the receiving line broke up, Senora Bustamante and her husband made their way through the crowded dining room, and out to the sunny terrace, where guests were gathered. A few minutes later, the couple were back in the dining room once more, and shortly after that, the bride was looking over the stairway to her bevy of bridesmaids and getting ready to toss away her white orchid bouquet. Lillian Kriete caught it.

Lavish Array of Wedding Presents

Meanwhile, everybody at the party had made at least one trip upstairs to see the lavish array of wedding gifts that filled two large rooms. In passing, I made mental notes of a few presents—a chased silver tea set and a matching punch bowl and cups . . . a gold flat table service . . . an electric sewing machine . . . silver candelabra, candlesticks, vases, goblets . . . half a dozen sizable checks, displayed in a glass case . . . and the most luxurious silver fox coat I have ever seen, a gift to the bride from her grandmother, who also came up from Caracas for the wedding.

Several hours later, I was making mental notes on an entirely different score. Guests arriving at the Peruvian Embassy for the reception, which began at 10 o'clock, met some of the dinner guests who were leaving. Justice and Mrs. Owen J. Roberts were getting their wraps; as were Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, the Secretary of State and Mrs. Cordell Hull, and Senator and Mrs. Warren Austin.

Meanwhile, the Peruvian Ambassador and the guest of honor, President Prado, were shaking hands with other guests who by that time were arriving in droves. Mrs. Truxton Beale and Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, both wearing red frocks, and looking very much as if they had picked them on purpose to wear in that red-walled room, were seated and held a sort of dual court in the center of the room . . . Mrs. J. Borden Harriman chatted with Henry Norweb, United States Ambassador to Peru, and a group of other guests, including the South African Minister and Mrs. Ralph William Close, and the Norwegian Minister and Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne . . . Percy Blair made a perilous journey through the crowded dining room to get a glass of champagne for Mrs. Richard McCreery . . . Senora de Cardenas and Senora de Blanco found chairs together in the smaller salon and were soon joined by Narcissus Arimburu, Peruvian Chief of Protocol.

Prado Finds Washington 'Delightful'

Smiling, amiably chatting with first one guest and then another—now in Spanish, now in English—was the Peruvian President, who told me he found Washington "delightful," and hoped to come back again sometime . . . Until after 11 o'clock he and his Ambassador stood near the door of the drawing room to receive . . . Later, they mingled with the company in the dining room, and I saw the Ambassador escorting Miss Mabel T. Boardman toward the buffet table about midnight.

The Argentine Ambassador and Senora de Espil, among the late arrivals, came in shortly after the short receiving line had broken up. Coasting in about the same time were the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs and Mrs. Nelson Rockefeller and the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Adolf Berle, and many others.

TOWN TOPICS: Too bad the young officer who recently wrote me a letter (published in this column a few days ago) didn't sign his name. You'll remember, he felt the young officers were the "forgotten men of the service;" that they were sadly overlooked in a city where all the social attention, dances, etc., seemed to be planned for the enlisted men . . . Well, if I had his name, he wouldn't lack for attention any longer. A number of girls have written in, asking his name and address; and Mrs. Cary Langhorne has purchased a box for the forthcoming Washington Horse Show, which she would like to turn over to the officer and some of his friends . . . Furthermore, members of the Horse Show committee will gladly see that he meets some of the attractive junior leaguers who will be on hand full force at the Horse Show both days . . . Now, if he'll just send his name in to me, I promise he and his friends won't be overlooked any longer.

Lady Broderick is urging all her friends to see the motion picture, "The Invaders." Her nephew, Naill MacGinnis, has a supporting role and has received very good notices from criticis . . . "He plays the part of a Nazi," says Lady Broderick, "but not such a bad one" . . . Lady Broderick, incidentally, does most of her drumming up of trade for "The Invaders" at her desk at the British War Relief headquarters. That's where she presides over the "white elephant" table, and manages to sell practically every item that comes her way. That, too, is where she collects tinfoil, smoothes it out, and gets it ready to sell by the pound—all for the cause, of course.

Helen C. Lyons Becomes Bride Of W. P. Harris in Home Rites

Couple to Live In Baltimore After May 15

The moon is noted for being conducive to romance, and in the case of the former Miss Helen Claire Lyons and William Penn Harris, jr., the stars were in on it too.

This particular romance began under undeniably celestial influence at a meeting of the Amateur Astronomical Association, flourished at successive meetings, and culminated in a wedding Saturday evening at the home of the bride's parents, Capt. and Mrs. Ulrich Sherman Lyons.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, and right in line with the theme of the story is the fact that before going into the Army, he was an astronomer at the Naval Observatory. He has just returned to Washington from duty in Texas.

The vows were read by the Rev. Clarence W. Cranford before the fireplace, in the presence of about 20 close friends and relatives. Later a reception was held for about 125 guests.

Bride Wears Gown Of White Chiffon

The bride was gowned in white chiffon featuring a long train. Her veil of illusion was fingertip and was caught by a coronet of pearls. She carried a shower bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley. The couple was unattended.

Mrs. Lyons had chosen a powder-blue chiffon dress with yellow roses. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Penn Harris of Frederick County, Va. The latter wore rose faille with a corsage of gardenias. Here for the wedding were Mrs. Ben Orcutt of Youngstown, Ohio, and Mrs. Maurice Head of Carlinsville, Ill., both aunts of the bride. They arrived about a week ago and plan to extend their visit here for another week.

Mr. and Mrs. Harris, jr., went first to Frederick and are now on a honeymoon trip in the Virginia mountains. After May 15 they will live in Baltimore.

Mrs. Gruening Entertains to Help 'Save the Children'

Entertaining at her new home on West Beach Drive, Mrs. Ernest Gruening, wife of the Governor of Alaska, was hostess yesterday afternoon at a tea for the benefit of the Save the Children Federation.

After this party, presuming the truth of the old axiom about practice making perfect, Mrs. Gruening should be even better prepared to carry out her purpose of organizing a federation program in Alaska when she returns there shortly. The federation's work was explained by Mrs. Irene Caldwell, chairman of the Washington committee.

Spring's influence was evident in the table centerpiece of lilies of the valley and pink dogwood from Mrs. Gruening's back yard. Assisting the hostess by pouring were Mrs. William O. Douglas, wife of the Supreme Court Justice; Representative Margaret Chase Smith of Maine, Mrs. Anthony J. Dimond, Mrs. Arthur J. Altmeyer, Mrs. Walter Wyatt and Mrs. Barnet Nover.

Bolivian Envoy Is Sponsor of Art Exhibit

The works of a feminine head-hunter with a new theory—Marina Nunez Del Prado—will go on display this afternoon at the National Museum. Invitations to the opening of the exhibit, which is not so gruesome as it sounds, have been sent out by the Ambassador of Bolivia, Dr. Luis Fernando Guachalla, for 3 o'clock.

Working from a sculptor's standpoint rather than with a machete, the artist has a number of notable "heads" to her credit though she has been in this country less than a year. She "sculps," not "scalps," with the theory that character should be portrayed through the mouth rather than the eyes.

The eyes, she thinks, beautiful and expressive though they may be in life, depend upon color for their meaning. This is lost in sculpture, but the lines of the mouth can be made to do for the clay image what the eyes do for the living model.

From the high ranks of officialdom in her collection are the heads of Vice President Henry Wallace and of Chief Justice Harlan Fiske Stone. A feminine representative of the diplomatic circles is Senora de Guachalla, wife of the Minister of the artist's homeland. Others who have sat for her are Paul McNutt, Mrs. Claude Pepper, Mrs. Thomas Burke and Miss Jane Culbertson.

A group of the artist's Bolivian sculptures were exhibited at the Grand Central Art Galleries in New York a few weeks ago, and she has previously had 14 exhibitions in Bolivia, Peru, Chile, Argentina and Uruguay.

Bride of Army Officer Returns For the Duration

Once upon a time wedding stories always ended, "The couple will return from their wedding trip . . ." Now, as often as not, it is the bride who returns alone while her husband's destination for reasons military is left unknown.

So it is that Mrs. Raymond Allen Osbourn, the bride of Lieutenant Osbourn, Medical Corps U. S. Army, has returned to Washington following their wedding trip in New England. She is the former Miss Dorothea Elizabeth Schumann, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Schumann of Chillicothe, Ohio. Lieutenant Osbourn's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Herbert A. Osbourn of Washington.

They were married the morning of April 22 in the Chapel of Walter Reed Hospital. The ceremony was performed by Chaplain Edward J. McTague before an altar banked with pink gladioli. The Rev. Arthur J. O'Leary, president of Georgetown University, was present at the service.

The bride, escorted to the altar by her father, was gowned in white satin made with a long train over which draped a fingertip veil. She carried a white prayer book from which fell a cascade of white flowers. Miss Nora Shearer was maid of honor and only attendant. She wore a gown of blue mousseline and carried Talisman roses. Best man was Lieut. Joseph M. Barker of the Army Medical Corps.

A reception followed the ceremony at the Old Hostess House, where refreshments were served. A large number of relatives and friends attended both the wedding and reception. When the couple left on their wedding trip, the bride wore a wheat-colored suit with copper accessories and a corsage of Talisman roses.

Lieut., Mrs. Kurtz Make Home Here

The ceremony was performed at 8 o'clock in the evening by the Rev. Frederick Poag in the chapel of Holiday House in Alexandria. Spring flowers were used for the setting, and the bride was given in marriage by her father and attended by her mother.

Her white marquisette gown was fashioned on colonial lines and she carried a bridal bouquet of white iris, sweetpeas and lilies. The bride, firmerly of Oak Park, was living at Holiday House before her marriage. A graduate of Wellesley College, she has been employed by American Air Lines at National Airport.

Lieut. Kurtz was attended by Addison Foster. He is a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania and received his commission as an Army pilot in 1926. Before his induction into the Air Corps he was an executive of American Air Lines. He is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard G. Kurtz of Ardmore, Pa., who were here for the wedding.

U. S. to Check Men Rejected For Heart Ills

National headquarters of the Selective Service System announced yesterday that registrants previously rejected for heart ailments soon may be called up for reexamination and possible reclassification.

Col. Leonard G. Cowntree, chief of the medical division, said that many instances of heart disorders might have been merely temporary. Such men, he stated, examined at a time when they were not unduly excited or nervous, might be found perfectly normal and fit for military service.

Col. Rowntree estimated that approximately 100,000 registrants of the first two million examined were rejected because of heart diseases.

Doctors to Register

Meanwhile, at least 1000 Washington doctors are expected to sign up between 9 a. m. and 6 p. m. today in a voluntary registration called by the District Procurement and Assignment Committee, according to a statement late last night by Dr. F. X. McGovern, chairman.

The inventory, Dr. McGovern explained, is designed to measure the availability of medical men to a greatly increased wartime population in Washington.

Although a nation-wide registration of doctors already has been held, the results will not be known in time to stem the stream of physicians going into military duty.

Registration at Hospitals

"It would be a dangerous situation," said Dr. McGovern, "if the civilian population of Washington were left without enaugh physicians. Therefore we must know how how many doctors can be counted on to fill civilian needs here. But it is, of course, essential that we supply as many doctors as we possibly can for military services."

Registration, open to every physician licensed to practice in the District, will take place at the Medical Society Building, 1718 M Street Northwest, and at the following hospitals:

Funds for Bomb-Resistant Roof on Capitol Voted by Senate

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

As a bomb-protection measure, the Capitol this summer may get the new roof members of Congress have been discussing for several years.

The Senate yesterday voted to add $331,880 to the $27,547,628 legislative appropriation bill for this purpose, and then voted itself a priority rating to insure delivery of materials.

Senator Green (Democrat), of Rhode Island, declared the present skylights over both the Senate and House chambers could not withstand bomb hits "even in the neighborhood of Capitol Hill."

"A bomb falling three blocks away would be a serious threat to this chamber and that of the House of Representatives as well," he declared. "Glass would shower upon our heads, causing not only casualties but fatalities."

His amendment to the bil lstipulated th glass should be replaced by reinforced concrete slaps, and provided for redecoration, accoustical treatment and improved lighting. Although the skylights are historic, members have learned the sun does not always shine through.

House Leaders Agree

Senator Green said he had talked with House leaders before inserting the amendment and that they were in agreement. Bfor. th House has has been more reluctant than the Senate to vote money for Capitol structural changes.

It is estimated that replacing the roofs will take about si xmonths. The Senate will meet in the old Supreme Court chamber while the work is being done, and the House in the caucus room of the House Office Building. Lack of long Congressional recesses in recent years have been a factor in delaying the roof changes. Both roofs have been reinforced with iron girders.

Senator Green said all the old iron used to suspend the skylights and the more recent reinforcements would be scrapped and used for victory. He said the new steel roofs would weigh much less than the present 120-ton House roof and 90-ton Senate model.

Squares of glass making up the skylights bear the coats of arms of the 48 States and the territories.

More for Clerk Hire

Also in the bill voted by the Senate was $45,000 for additional clerk hire for Senators from the more populous States. Three additional clerks at $1500 would be permitted the Senators from New York and two additional each Senator from Pennsylvania, Illinois, Ohio, Michigan, Texas and California.

This hiring of extra clerks is a compromise and a saving of $27,800 over the proposal made at first that each of the 96 Senators be permitted an additional clerk at $1800 a year.

Although the extra money for ceilings brings the total legislative bill appropriatiton to $27,897,508, this is $971,310 under estimates for 1943 as first made and $1,409,616 under the appropriation for 1942.

Atlantic Shark Livers Tested for Vitamins

Ocean City, N. J. (U.P.)—A pot of gold for New Jersey fishermen may be at the end of experiments on shark liver oil by a Philadelphia pharmaceutical company.

If the oil proves to contain vitamins D and A, commercial fishermen off the Atlantic coast expect to profit on the once-despised fish as have fishermen off the Pacific Coast.

Cutting off of the supply of cod liver oil from Norway through German occupation and increased Army and Navy needs have boomed the shark-catching industry.

The drug company has ordered 20 drums of shark livers from a local fisherman to continue preliminary tests.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Fleming to Succeed Kintner as Censor

John R. Fleming will be given the job of censoring speeches of top Federal officials at the Office of Facts and Figures. He'll succeed Capt. Robert B. Kintner, the former columnist, who'll be given another assignment by the Army . . . The Office of Price Administration is seting up a labor relations section. R. R. Brooks of WPB's labor supply division will head it up . . . Representative Dies claims foreign agents are out after his son but he hasn't complained to the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the agency that should be protecting his son if he's in danger.

The Social Security Board is in for a round of moving. It's Bureau of Old-Age and Survivors Insurance will soon be moved out of the city. The board itself and as many of its functions as possible will then be moved to the bureau's H Street building. By approving the H Street building for the board, the super space committee now appears to have no other plans for SSB decentralization, with one possible exception. That is the board's regional office. It was planned to move the office to Silver Spring, Md., a few days ago but the transfer fell through at the last moment. The employes now suspect they'll be moved to another city.

Hollywood soon will start producing a movie that will attempt to put over a thought that some of the best minds in the Government have struggled with—tolerance. It will be built around an immigrant boy, Spencer Tracy will be given the part, and it will show how immigrants of all classes have helped to make this country great. It will be an appeal for tolerance of the minority groups, the Germans, Jews, Italians, Negroes, and others. King Vidor, who will produce it, has been here to talk over the theme with Attorney General Biddle and other Federal officials. The movie will have its premiere here in the fall.

The War Production Board has cleaned up a mess that threatened to become a scandal. Checks were being issued to former employes whose names had never been taken off the payroll. Several hundred former employes are understood to be involved. It was easy enough to catch up with most of the employes as they transferred to other Federal jobs and, of course, they couldn't draw two Federal checks for the same working period. Most of the other checks were not even delivered and those that were must be returned to the Government. General Accounting Office will attend to the collection.

Even Federal officials who ride in official autos are worried over gas rationing. What some of them are really afraid of is pooling of all Federal cars. In that event all officials, except cabinet officers, would lose exclusive use over cars assigned to them . . . Empoyment Service probably will be transferred to the new Manpower Commission by executive order and made the backbone of the agency. It is now in Social Security . . . The State Department and Board of Economic Warfare are still bickering over the proposed executive order that would clarify their foreign operations. Some believe the President purposely transferred part of State's functions to BEW to make State move faster in South America.

A net increase of 5396 Federal employes in the District was reported by the Civil Service Commission yesterday for the month of March. This pushed the total number of Federal workers in the executive branch here to 238,801. However, the number of new employes brought to Washington totaled more than 10,000. An estimated 5000 employes were transferred out of the city during the month, mainly by the decentralization program. The Office of Emergency Management hired 3600 new employes during the month, the most of any one agency. War came next with 2921 employes.

The Budget Bureau is making a decentralization survey of the entire Treasury Department. Instead of jumping to first one department and then another the bureau is now concentrating on one agency at a time. Treasury is the first to be placed under the spotlight. Apparently State was passed over.

Tunes from the piano in the I. Enos Ray School, Takoma Park, Md., will no longer bother neighbors. Thieves broke into the school Saturday night and removed the instrument's wires. Prince Georges County police are investigating.

Out on a Limb!

To cut a 20-foot high limb off a tree, Takoma Park town employe William Butler, placed his ladder against the limb. When the limb fell the ladder did too. Butler hung to the stump, yelling lustily, until the fire department arrived.

Alexandria Council Gets Bridge Plan

Proposal for New District-Virginia Railway Link to Be Studied Tonight

Plans for an emergency railroad crossing linking Virginia and the District of Columbia, presented by the United States Engineer's Office, will be studied by the Alexandria city council at its regular meeting tonight at 7:30 in the city hall council chamber.

City officials have divulged no information concerning the proposed structure, but it is understood a site in Alexandria has tentatively been suggested for the Virginia terminus. A drawing of the span, which does not mention the specific location, has already been submitted to City Engineer C. Luckett Watkins, and the cooperation of the council has been asked in development of plans for the auxiliary structure.

The bridge has been proposed to alleviate congestion on the only bridge carrying north-south rail traffic between Virginia and the District, and to provide an alternate span in the event of damage to the existing structure.

A docket of 15 items has been prepared for the council's consideration. Among major matters is an $18,000 appropriation for purchase of land now occupied by the Potomac View Playground on the 400 block of South Lee Street.

Several applications for rezoning have been docketed.

National Hospital Day To Be Observed Today

The Alexandria Hospital will participate in the Nationwide observance of National Hospital Day this afternoon with a reception and inspection tour of the hospital building, officials announced yesterday. The hospital will be open for public inspection from 2:30 to 4:30.

The observance also marks the seventieth anniversary of the local institution, which opened on May 12, 1872.

Members of the auxiliary board of the hospital will act as hostesses at a reception to be held in the nurses' home, adjacent to the hospital on Washington Street, while volunteer workers who are now receiving practical experience at the hospital as nurses aides will conduct guests on a tour of the building.

New equipment and other features which have been added to the hospital in the past year will be on display during the afternoon.

Red Cross Nutrition Course Begins Today

The Alexandria chapter of the American Red Cross will inaugurate another in its series of nutrition courses today with a two-hour class in the auditorium of the Virginia Public Service Co., starting at 10 a. m., Miss Ida Lansden, home economics director for the utility company, will conduct the course.

Classes will continue every Tuesday and Thursday morning for a period of five weeks. Women wishing to enroll in the course may enroll through the Red Cross Chapter House, 1012 Prince Street, report directly to the initial class today.

Students of the George Washington High School led all other entries in the Class A division of the annual Virginia Literary and Athletic League literary contests which ended Saturday at Charlottesville on a basis of total points scored, officials of the school reported yesterday. Three individual championships were brought back by the group, while several other competitors won honorable mention in their respective divisions.

Individual winners in the State contest were Edward Mason, boys' public speaking; Mary Louise Hopke, girls' public speaking, and Douglas Schooley, boys' prose reading. The winning contestants were included in the group directed by Miss Mary Waller Dickinson.

David Barry, a member of the group directed by Miss Agnes Reynolds, while the cast of the one-act play, "Good Night, Caroline," directed by Mrs. Inez Jones, was awarded honorable mention in the dramatic division. Members of the cast included Ernest Sult, Martha King, Ernest Bragg and Helen Stoeffler.

Prince Georges Man Seeks Congress Seat

Ned Waters, a former town commissioner of Berwyn Heights, Md., yesterday filed notice of his intention of running against Representative Lansdale G. Sasscer for the Democratic Congressional nomination in the Fifth Maryland District.

In filing his candidacy, Waters said he intended to run on a campaign for the establishment of a national lottery "to pull the country out of debt."

Such a lottery, he said, could be operated exclusively by the Treasury Department, and if gambling of all types were legalized, "it would bring in more revenue than the country now receives from liquor taxation.

He declared: "People are going to gamble no matter what kind of laws are passed—Why shouldn't the Government get some of that money and rescue the taxpayers' burdens?"

Waters, who is 36, married and the father of a seven-year-old daughter, was until February the secretary of the Young Men's Democratic Club of Prince Georges County.

The need for a greater participation by women in the war effort was stressed by Isaac George, executive director of the Maryland Council of Defense, in an address yesterday before a general meeting of the Womens Defense Activities at the County Service Building in Hyattsville.

Appearing at the meeting with the director were Mrs. Julian Trenbohn, State director of women's activities; J. Robert Sherwood, chairman of the county defense council, and Mrs. Ruth Keane, county director of women's activities, who presided.

George outlined an eight-point program of activities to be carried out by the women of the State under the defense program. The activities stressed were agriculture, consumer problems, nutrition, child care, nursing, industry, recreation and conservation.

Reports on the activities of the various committees in the county organization were heard from Miss Marie Mount and Miss Ethel Regan, State and county nutrition chairmen, respectively; Edna McNaughton, State chairman of child care; Lillian Robertson, nursing, and Mrs. Ernest Cory, conservation.

Mrs. Joseph Longridge was named chairman of the county child care at the meeting.

Members of the Riverdale Heights Garden Club will hold a flower mart at the home of Mrs. Embert A. Le Lacheur Thursday, from 2 to 9 p. m.

Plants, bulbs, seed and handicraft are to be sold and the proceeds will go to the club.

Fort Meade Men Buy $128,000 Of War Bonds

Fort George G. Meade, Md., May 11 (AP).—Maj. Jay M. Holmes, Fort Meade war bonds officer, said today soldiers at this Army post had subscribed for $128,000 worth of war bonds in the first five days of a campaign being conducted in military posts.

"These soldiers are not only willing to fight the war, but also to finance it," he said, adding that he expected 100 per cent participation before the drive ended.

Holmes said most of the subscriptions were from enlisted men using a special pay reservation plan made available by the War Department, and that the response was "amazing."

The war bonds committee emphasized the value of savings to ease economic conditions of soldiers after the war.

250 Recalled By Arlington Draft Boards

Physically Unfit Registrants Will Be Reexamined For Rehabilitation

Two hundred and fifty Arlington County registrants, previously granted deferment for physical disability, have been called for reexamination tomorrow night at 7:30 at the Washington and Lee High School, officials of the county's two Selective Service boards announced yesterday.

Reexamination of the men has been ordered as part of a general program having as its objective the rehabilitation of thousands of registrants who have been deferred because of remedial disability. The local examination, however, will be simply a "screening" process to determine obvious defects of permanent nature and a majority of those recalled will be sent to Fort Myer for a more thorough physical check.

The Arlington County group includes men previously placed in either Class 1-B or 4-F.

Meanwhile, with one of the county's two local boards having moved its headquarters last week, officials appealed to registrants to determine their local board numbers before contacting Selective Service officials for information or on other business matters.

Although classification cards indicate to which of the two boards each registrant is subject, many men still have not ascertained their board numbers and considerable confusion has resulted since the two boardds established separate headquarters, a spokesman said.

Headquarters of Local Board No. 2 remain in the county courthouse, telephone Oxford 2572, while Board No. 1 has moved to 3004 Lee Highway, telephone Oxford 2802. Registrants are urged to report to the headquaurters to which they have been assignd for any matters pertaining to their Selective Servic status.

Blackout to Shorten Rally Of Suburban Hospital Group

Because of the scheduled blackout for Washington and nearby areas tonight, the program for the rally of the Suburban Hospital Association, Bethesda-Chevy Chase, Md., tonight at 7:30 o'clock in the Leland Junior High School, has been shortened, Randolph C. Bishop, president, announced last night.

The change in program will not interfere with talks to be made by Brig. Gen. Philip Fleming, administrator of the Federal Works Agency, and Dr. Thomas Parran, surgeon general of the United States Public Health Service, Bishop said. The event will be over by 9:30 p. m. to enable the audience to reach home by 10 p. m. Immediately after his speech, Administrator Fleming will broadcast the same talk over a Nation-wide radio hookup from 10 until 10:15 p. m.

The program at the school is being held in connection with National Hospital Day. Besides the talks, there will be a concert by the Leland Junior High School Band under the direction of Raymond Hart.

The hospital association was organized recently to seek Federal funds for construction of a 100-bed hospital for the Bethesda-Chevy Chase area. Mrs. Walter Perry, membership chairman, announced last night that 1800 persons had joined the association and that the membership was expected to reach 2000 by tonight.

Virginia Defense Sees No Conflict With Washington

A series of monthly test blackouts ordered for a number of Virginia cities and counties by State defense officials should entail no conflict between Washington and the nearby Virginia area, since District officials are planning tests "each calendar month and maybe more," Virginia Defense Coordinator J. H. Wyse said yesterday.

The Virginia order applies to the city of Alexandria and Arlington and Fairfax Counties, Wyse said, but indicated that monthly tests conducted by the northern Virginia communities in conjunction with District defense plans would be satisfactory to Virginia officials.

"The order is applicable only insofar as it does not conflict with the metropolitan Washington rules and regulations on civilian defense," he stated.

Wyse issued his statement in Richmond after his attention had been called to a statement by City Manager Carl Budwesky, of Alexandria, that "Alexandria's defense interests are more closely linked to those of the District than the rest of Virginia, and some adjustment will have to be made if monthly blackouts are ordered."

Silver Spring High School Girl, 15, Reported Missing

Washington, Montgomery County and Maryland State police last night were on the lookout for 15-year-old Shirley Anne Marks, Montgomery Blair High School sophomore and popularity contest entrant, who has been missing since Friday night from her home, 217 Williamsburg Drive, Silver Spring, Md.

Her father, Alvin T. Marks, a civilian employe of the Coast Guard, said the girl was driven into Silver Spring Friday night by her brother, Alvin, to attend a movie and go bowling with a girl acquaintance and had promised to be home by midnight.

Brown-haired, blued-eyed and 5 feet 1 inch tall, she was wearing a red and white flowered skirt, light blue silk blouse, tan sport shoes and an aqua coat. She was "Miss Four Corners" in the Silver Spring Lions Club's popularity contest last June.

Rockville Wins County Water Fight

Montgomery Must Pay Assessments For Charges Under Circuit Court Ruling

Montgomery County, Md., will have to pay water and sewer charges assessed against it by the town of Rockville under a ruling handed down yesterday by the Circuit Court at Rockville.

County officials, who have been at odds with town officials over the water and sewer bill amounting to $604.57, will accept the ruling as final and will not appeal, it was understood unofficially.

Circuit Court Judges Stedman Prescott and Charles W. Woodward dismissed the bill of complaint filed on behalf of the County Commissioners seeking an injunction restraining the town of Rockville from collecting the water and sewer bill, alleging the bill was a tax and that the county was exempt.

The judges held that "no valid reason can be found that would exempt the county for the water furnished by the town of Rockville," and held further that "whether the sewer charge be a tax or not the county is not exempted from this charge because exemption of taxes must be strictly construed and it does not appear that it was the intention of the Legislature to exempt the county from paying the charge for sewer services."

Comptroller Alexander K. Hancock had refused to pay the bill after Counsel Joseph A. Cantrel ruled it was a tax and that the county was exempt from taxation. The town had threatened to turn off the water last Wednesday if the bill was not paid and a ruling of the court to settle the dispute was decided upon at a conference between county and town officials.

Girls Offered Chance to Aid In War Work

A junior auxiliary for girls who desire to help in the war emergency program will be formed by the American Women's Voluntary Services, with registration beginning Friday at A. W. V. S. headquarters, 2170 Florida Avenue Northwest.

Regular courses will be given in junior first aid and junior civilian protection, according to yesterday's announcement. Consent of parents is required for registration in these courses, which will start June 1 and June 2, respectively.

In addition to the training courses, several opportunities for immediate usefulness will be offered. A bicycle corps to act as messengers and supplement the work of the A. W. V. S. motor corps will be formed. Some of the girls can volunteer for work at the A. W. V. S. canteens, or to take training in child care work at settlement and neighborhood houses.

Girls who have had some artistic training are wanted for poster work, and assistants are wanted for typing and office help.

A salvage corps will be formed for the girls and an ambulance given over to the collection. Mrs. Henry Slocum and Mrs. Sidney Lansburgh, jr., head the auxiliary.

Enlisted at 13 in 1917, Wants to Serve Again

East St. Louis, Ill. (U.P.).—The second youngest man to serve in the first A.E.F. wants to go back into action as part of the second.

He is John Compton of East St. Louis, who enlisted in the first World War at the age of 13. Compton applied for re-enlistment in the Army and will go to Peoria for a physical examination and induction.

Compton, now 38 years old, was the youngest member of the American Legion to serve in the Army. He served overseas for fourteen and one-half months after enlisting at East Chicago, Ind.

"Sure, I had to lie about my age," he said. "But I was itching to get my finger on a trigger. The sergeant decided I was a little young to be toting a Springfield so they assigned me to driving one of those four-wheel-drive trucks."

Legion Strips '42 Conclave of Nonessentials

By the Associated Press

Chicago, May 11.—A small, short, streamlined convention—stripped of traditional crowd-drawing features and formal frolic — was planned today by the American Legion.

Setting a significant war-time precedent for large annual gatherings, the organization's convention liaison committee announced that the 1942 conclave would be confined to a weekend business meeting of a limited number of delegates and officials to avoid placing a burden on the Nation's transportation facilities.

The committee recommended that the sessions be held September 19, 20 and 21 at the Legion's permanent national headquarters in Indianapolis. National Commander Lynn U. Stambaugh telephoned his approval from Atlanta, Ga. The plans will be voted upon by telegraph by members of the National Executive Committee within the next few days and their decision will be made public by Stambaugh.

Previous plans to convene in New Orleans were cancelled on the advice of the Office of Defense Transportation.

The committee decided to eliminate the annual big parade, the drum corps contests and other spectacular attractions. It suggested also that attendance be confined o 10 per cent of the regular number of delegates and national officers and members of standing committee who are essential to the legion's program.

The committee chairman, Leo J. Duster, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, estimated that this year's meeting would be attended by 400 or 500 delegates and officials. By way of contrast, last year's convention drew approximately 1500 delegates alone. It was calculated that the 1939 gathering attracted 225,000 visitors to Chicago and 100,000 marched in the mammoth parade.

U. S. Indicts 3 For OK on Bad Engine Parts

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, May 11.—Three officials at a Lakewood war plant were arraigned today on charges of conspiracy to defraud the Government by placing "O. K." on engine parts rejected by Navy inspectors.

The three, who pleaded innocent before Federal Judge Emerich B. Freed, are:

Harry J. Harsch, 45, of Rocky River, vice president and superintendent of the John Harsch Bronze & Foundry Co.; Alfred H. Huc, 28, production manager, and Walter E. Cowie, 27, assistant production manager.

The trio is accused of conspiring to defraud the Government by replacing Navy inspectorts "rejected" symbols on bronze rings and castings for Navy engines with "approved" symbols.

Jerome N. Curtis, assistant United States Attorney, said that as a result, some engine parts rejected by Navy inspectors at the Harsch plant were now on American battlefronts, since it had been impossible to retrieve all rejected parts shipped from the Lakewood foundry.

A fourth man, employed at the Harsch plant, was mentioned in the indictment as a coconspirator, but indicted.

H. B. Harsch, treasurer and general manager of the plant and a brother of Harry J. Harsch, said in a statement: "The Navy have certain regulations that they give us, to which we must adhere. My brother misinterpreted some of the regulations unconsciously. The Navy have asked that my brother and the two production men have nothing to do with Navy production at our plant until this situation is settled."

Lewis Calls Miners' Chiefs On C.I.O. Debt

By the Associated Press

John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers Union, yesterday summoned the union's policy committee and executive board to resolve a conflict with the C. I. O. and to act on problems created by the war. Meetings will begin in Washington May 25.

Lewis ,who fathered the C. I. O. wants repayment of $1,665,000 he advanced to it from the Miners' treasury. The C. I. O., now headed by Philip Murray, vice president of the United Mine Workers, denies the sum constitutes a debt to be repaid in cash. The C. I. O. is dunning the Mine Workers for per capita tax payments which amount to about $30,00 0a month and are about three months in arrears.

The indorsement of Lewis' stand by the U. M. W. executive board might lead to an open break between the miners and th C. I. O.

War problems include those of Selective eSrvice, tire rationing, vacations and bond purchasing. The mine union leaders may adopt a general statement of policy on the prosecution of the war.

A. U. M. W. spokesman and some operators have suggested that miners forego their week's vacation this year in sections where there is a pressing demand for a certain type of high grade of bituminous coal. These sections include Pennsylvania and parts of Kentucky and West Virginia. It is understood the operators would still make the $20 vacation payment to the miners as provided in the wage agreement.

Intensified Health Activities Urged to Avert Epidemics

Intensification of public health activities throughout the metropolitan area, as a means of averting epidemics during the emergency, was urged by two public health officials at the regular meeting of the Metropolitan Health Officers Association yesterday at the Washington Golf and Country Club in Arlington.

Dr. George C. Ruhland, District health officer, in discussing the importance of child hygiene in wartime, urged expansion of preschool health clinics and called for an intensification of public health nursing services throughout the entire metropolitian area.

Pointing to the increasing danger of epidemics brought bauot by congestion in the areas surrounding Washington, Dr. Leland Parr, professor of bacteriology at George Washington University, stressed the importance of immunization against communicable diseases and urged greater efforts to curb the spread of typhoid, smallpox and other highly communicable maladies.

Dr. Daniel Seckinger, assistant District health commissioner, presided over the luncheon session, while visiting members were welcomed by County Manager Frank C. Hanrahan of Arlington. About 60 public health representatives from the District, Montgomery and Prince Georgies Counties in Maryland, and Alexandria and Arlington, Fairfax, Prince William, Loudoun and Fauquier Counties in Virginia attended the meeting.

Loaf of Bread Costs Army About 2½ Cents

In a recent survey covering a month's operation of 17 Army Quartermaster bakeries, it was found that the average cost of producing a pound loaf of bread was 2.453 cents, the War Department reports.

The bakeries under survey used more than 850 tons of flour and produced 2,508,426 pounds of bread at a total cost of $60,464.01. The bread was made with enriched Army flour containing Vitamin B-1, B-2, and other energy-giving materials. The Army bakers averaged 14.17 pounds of bread for every 100 pounds of flour.

Dr. Phillips' Funeral to Be Tomorrow

Funeral services for the Very Rev. ZeBarney T. Phillips, dean of Washington Cathedral and chaplain of the United States Senate, who died Sunday night at his home, will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow at the cathedral, Mount St. Alban.

His body will lie in state in the Chapel of St. Mary from 11 to 1, and interment of his ashes will take place in the cathedral after the services.

Dr. Phillips was well known and loved in the Senate, where he was regarded as a "member." The upper House took time out ysterday to listen to eulogies from the floor paying tribute to their chaplain.

Barkley Pays Tribute

In presenting a resolution, which was quickly adopted, expressing the Senate's "profound sorrow" at Dr. Phillips' death, Majority Leader Barkley said the chaplain had been "an intensely human man who enjoyed the love, confidence and respect of every Senator" and that "we all mourn his untimely death."

Dr. James Shera Montgomery, chaplain of the House, referred in the opening prayer in the Senate to the "great loss" to that body in the death of its chaplain.

Peru's President Manuel PPrado, in an address to the upper house expressed the desire "to associate myself with the Senators in their loss."

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, termed Dr. Phillips' death the loss of "one of the most outstanding presbyters of the Episcopal Church in America."

Honorary Pallbearers Listed

The Choral Society of Washington Cathedral, which was organized last fall, mainly through Dr. Phillips' efforts, will dedicate tomorrow night's performance of Verdi's "Requiem" to his memory.

Honorary pallbearers will include the Chapter of the Cathedral, the vestry of Dr. Phillips' former church, Epiphany, and a special delegation from the Senate which was to be appointed today. Those from the Chapter are Corcoran Thom, Hon. William R. Castle, Robert V. Fleming, Lloyd B. Wilson, C. F. R. Ogilby and Hon. George Horton Pepper of Philadelphia.

Six young clergymen of the Diocese of Washington will be active pallbearers. They are the Rev. D. Wade Safford of Kensington Church, the Rev. Hunter M. Lewis, Epiphany, the Rev. Edward B. Harris, Chapel of the Good Shepherd, the Rev. Paul Wilbur of St. Stephen and the Incarnation, the Rev. Reno S. Harp, Takoma Park Trinity CChurch, and the Rev. C. Randolph Mengers, St. Columbus.

Bishop Freeman will conduct the services. Assisting him will be the Canon of Washington Cathedral, T. O. Wedel, Charles W. F. Smith, and Curtis Draper, jr.

Woodside Pastor Marks Anniversary

The Rev. Ralph Dela Smith, on Sunday, celebrated the twentieth anniversary of his pastorate of Woodside Methodist Church by saying nothing about the important occasion from the pulpit.

Instead, he preached a typical Mother's Day sermon, lauding the virtues of motherhood, with members of his family seated in the congregation. They were Mrs. Smith, Cathryn Ann, 13; Ralph, jr., 16, and William Francis, 8. Another daughter, Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Kemp, was not present.

Before going to the church, at 8814 Georgia Avenue, Silver Spring, Md., for the morning service, the clergyman and several members of his family obligingly posed for the press photographer on the steps of their home at 8903 First Avenue.

Dr. Smith's 88-year-old father, William F. Smith of Hughesville, Pa., was too ill to attend the services, according to the pastor, who is a native of that community.

Dr. Smith, who has been active throughout Montgomery County religious and civic circles, first occupied the Woodside pulpit on May 8—Mother's Day—1922. The congregation has expanded steadily under his guidance.

He is past president of the Montgomery County Ministerial Union, and is a member of the board of trustees of the Methodist Union and of American University.

ELLY SMITH looks over some of her gifts

Blonde, 24, Pretty—Flying Men Fall for Her

New York, May 11 (Wide World)—Elly Smith has kissed perhaps a hundred United Nations airmen goodby since Pearl Harbor, and almost every one has written that he'd like to come back some day and carry her away in a little silver Spitfire.

When you've seen Elly, and talked with her, it isn't hard to understand why flying men fall for her; why one even named a bomber for her, and why they have flooded her with letters, cablegrams, gifts and trinkets to the point where she thinks she'll open a museum.

Since December 7 Elly has devoted her after-work hours to making life more cheerful for the boys from all corners of the globe who touch the United States, bound for destinations unknown.

It is, as Elly says, a very special service. American soldiers outward bound are likely to have their sweethearts, friends or families on hand to give them a send-off.

But to Australians, New Zealanders, Britons and Canadians this country is a new and sometimes lonely world. There are no sweethearts to see them off.

That's where Elly comes in.

"I've often thought about American fliers and soldiers in strange lands," Elly explains. "You know what I mean. Are they having a good time? Are the girls nice to them? Can they have a date occasionally?

"Well, the more I got to thinking about it, the more I began to realize that the same situation exists right here in New York. Why, we've got hundreds of overseas fliers here all the time.

"So I decided there was a swell opportunity to do a little good-will work right at home. I think it's paying dividends, too. Did you see in the paper how our boys are being treated in Australia?"

Elly, of course, doesn't take credit for that by herself. There are hundreds of girls like her in New York helping to entertain members of visiting armed forces through the facilities of various war relief agencies.

Among her souvenirs are 127 letters, 13 telegrams, 10 cablegrams, overseas caps galore, arm insignia, photographs, compacts, cigarette cases, water colors and sketches, a toy kitten and a toy lion (flown to her from England by bomber).

A former "junior miss" model at Bonwit Teller's on Fifth Avenue, Elly Smith is 24 and Philadelphia-born.

She is blonde and pretty. Her vivacity is something that even healthy airmen fail to equal in a whirlwind evening.

The evening probably will start with the arrival of a group of fliers at the Rehearsal Club, in West Fifty-third Street, where Elly lives.

This club, sometimes called the "Ranch," houses some half a hundred young girl stage and radio hopefuls, and by the time Elly's squad arrives she has rounded up dates for all.

The party then will proceed to one of a number of midtown clubs where from time to time dances are held for men in the armed services.

If ever the Government of the United States wishes to reassure itself about the good will existing among the freedom fighting forces, it might take a look at Elly's letters:

From an R. A. F. pilot now on duty overseas —"Well, honey, my mind is too full of New York to say anything except thanks for a wonderful time. You know how much we all enjoy American hospitality . . ."

This one, from an Australian, bears witness to Elly's charm—"Christmas, 1941, will always be a memorable one for me . . . because it was on Christmas Day, 1941, that I first met Elly."

It hasn't all been sheer joy to Elly. There have been heartaches. Three of those she bid goodby will never return. The third died only recently in a crackup in Burma.

Most of Elly's party arrangements are made through the British and American Ambulance Corps, which acts as a sort of entertainment clearing house for overseas personnel. But she also finds time to work for various other service organizations.

Washington Picturegoers Displaying Sound Sense

Spirit of Fair Play Shown Toward Lew Ayres; Fabulous Premiere for 'Yankee Doodle Dandy;' Items of News and Gossip of the Theater

IN THE CASE OF LEW AYRES, the film executives responsible for his pictures, the motion picture trade press, the newsprints and numerous other groups and individuals seem vastly to have underestimated the sound common sense and fairness of the picture-going public—at least of Washington's.

LEW AYRES

When the sensational news of Ayres' internment as a conscientious objector was announced, he was impulsively condemned to oblivion—or worse—by a large and vocal group that should have known better. For some incomprehensible reason, it was taken for granted that any future screen appearance of his would be the signal for some sort of ominous demonstration. From the outset, this has seemed to me an unwarranted aspersion upon the American sense of fair play.

So far as I know, Lew Ayres never has spoken a seditious word or one that could be construed as in any sense inimical to his country. It is merely that, like the Sergt. Alvin C. York of a quarter-century ago, he abhors the idea of human slaughter. For years Ayres has not eaten any food that has to be killed to be served. Not surprising then that he should rebel at the thought of slaying his fellow man. Whether it all stems from his reactions to "All Quiet on the Western Front," the first World War picture that made him a star, or some other more remote source, I wouldn't know. What everybody should know by now is that Lew Ayres had deep-seated convictions and the moral courage to stick to them. The sort of courage that is sometimes more exalted than the kind that carries a gun.

As I understand it, it is for the right of free men to form convictions, express and defend them that the United Nations are fighting. It is pleasant to note that audiences at Loew's Capitol, where Ayres currently is one of the stellar figures in "Fingers at the Window," seem to realize this.

After all, Lew IS in the service of his country in a non-combatant capacity. And besides that, he's a pretty good actor.

A five million dollar world premiere! And they're not kidding and neither are we. That is the sum it is hoped will be represented by the "ticket charge" paid by the audience in attendance in the Hollywood Theater, New York, on May 29, for the first showing of the Warner Brothers production of "Yankee Doodle Dandy," based on the life of George M. Cohan, with James Cagney as star. The pledge of War Bonds of denominations ranging from $25 to $25,000 will be the price of admission to the premiere screening, to be under the auspices of the New York War Savings Staff of the Treasury Department. The seats will be allocated to patrons according to the amounts pledged, the best, of course, going to the highest pledgers and so on, down the list. Fabulous as it may sound, the prices for the 1500 seats will be $25, $50, $100, $500, $1000, $5000, $10,000, $12,500 and $25,000. And you thought the Hollywood Victory Caravan came high!

In case you've bought your War Bonds and Stamps for the week, seats now are on sale at Homer L. Kitt's, 1330 G Street, for the Olney Theater's inaugural production of "George Washington Slept Here," starring Eddie Dowling and opening next Monday night, and mail orders are being received at the National for the two-week engagement of "Arsenic and Old Lace," opening on E Street the same night. Performances at the Olney will begin nightly at 8:45, and for matinees Thursday and Saturday at 2:45 p. m. Season reservations for the same seats each week may be made at the box-office.

Dots and Dashes

Two reasons for anticipating the new production of "The Spoilers" coming next to RKO-Keith's . . . That vicious fight, originally made famous by William Farnum and Tom Santschi, is said to have been whipped up in violence by John Wayne and Randolph Scott . . . Don't ask me how! . . . Then Robert W. Service, poet laureate of the Alaskan gold rush and author of "The Shooting of Dan McGrew," will be making his screen debut, playing himself in a brief sequence . . . The Broadway cast for the Olney's "George Washington Slept Here" arrived in town last Saturday and were joined Sunday by Eddie Dowling . . . Rehearsals began yesterday . . . The Motion Picture Theater Owners of D. C., last week handed $500 to the Army-Navy Emergency Relief as a token of what to expect when the 17,000 picture houses in the country really begin to drive . . . The local committee, headed by Carter Barron, of Loew's, and John J. Payette, of Warners, reads like a "Who's Who" of Washington's film executives . . . Why not? . . . That's what it is.

Them-as-Likes-Can-Have-'em Note

Quite a Heady Bit of Piloting!

RAY MILLAND AND JOHN WAYNE

probably are doing all right for themselves in seeming to be giving a certain gentleman a "bum steer." He shouldn't have stuck his neck out! This delicate bit of business would be in "Reap the Wild Wind," Cecil B. De Mille's Technicolor production coming to the Earle screen on Friday.

LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Light on 'Darkness'

Hollywood, May 11 (INS).—Lots of chatter over William Woods' new novel, "Edge of Darkness," brought out two weeks ago by J. P. Lippincott and purchased from the galley proofs by Warners before being published. It goes before the cameras in the early summer with Ann Sheridan and Humphrey Bogart in the leading roles.

ANN SHERIDAN

Saw Ann at Westmore's Beauty Parlor a few days ago and marriage certainly agrees with her. She looks well and and happy. She'll have Henry Blanke, who made one of her best pictures, "It All Came True," as producer of "Edge of Darkness," and Lewis Milestone as her director. By the by, this is "Millie's" first on a new Warner contract. He was at Warner's a long time ago and directed "Main Street," but this new deal only happened a few weeks ago and was signed by Lieut. Col. Jack Warner.

Hot news from New York is Lester Cowan, who made "Ladies in Retirement" in conjuction with Gilbert Miller, has planked down $40,000 for an English play, "Heart of the City." It ran only briefly in New York but was highly successful on the London stage. And here is the most interesting news of all. Merle Oberon will play the lead. She is now with the Victory Caravan, which is doing such splendid work and getting rave notices wherever it plays.

Virginia Bruce denied those rumors, printed eleswhere, and we will take the lady's word for it because she goes immediately into "careful, soft shoulders," at Twentieth Century-Fox. Not only will this be Virginia's first picture on the Westwood lot, but she gets a brand-new director Oliver H. P. Garrett, former screen writer, who will handle the megaphone for the first time. Jimmy Ellison gets the top male role in this picture which Walter Morosco produces.

No laughing matter to Jerry, the midget, that he has been signed to stand in for Charlie McCarthy in the next Edgar Bergen movie at RKO. Jerry says where most actors have dummies standing in for them he has to do it vice versa. "Just call me the little man who was almost there," says Jerry.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at Random: Diana Manners writes she and John (C. B. S.) Clark were wed April 16. Then she takes me to task because I didn't print it before. Her letter was the first news I had she had left movies in favor of matrimony; Dick Powell certainly gave the housewives who registered at Gardner School a treat when he took their registrations for the sugar-rationing board. He sat in from 8 to 8.

Norma Shearer and her-skier-heart, Marty Arrouge, at the Mocambo with Minna Wallis and John Durant (Tim's brother); John Howard and Mary Brian at "Life With Father." Also there were Shirley Temple, her mother and a young friend of Shirley's, Loren Wood; looks as if "Lady Bodyguard" is hexed. First illness took Ellen Drew out of the cast and then Ann Shirley sprained her back.

HEDDA HOPPER

Crib Leads in 'Corn'!

Hollywood, Calif, May 11.—Bette Davis gets the Ethel Barrymore role for the screen version of "The Corn Is Green," while Ida Lupino is set for the part of her daughter. Peculiar thing is that although these gals have been on the Warners lot for years, playing the same type of roles, they've never met. Bette said, "We've just never happened to run into each other, but guess we'll finally get together on the first day of shooting."

BETTE DAVIS

Picture won't start till fall, because Bette has to finish "Now, Voyager" and take a month's vacation, while Ida, recuperated from her illness, is finishing "The Hard Way." I can't think of any way harder, if you're not well, than competing with Bette in emotional roles.

The reason Arch Oboler is writing a play for Max Gordon is that Helen Broderick has a great admiration for Oboler, and she's never even met him! Helen never fails to listen to his Sunday air show, and was telling Max about it. Max became intrigued, called him up, made a date, met him, liked him and said, "Why don't you write a play for me?"

Could it be true that when the picture, "Constant Nymph," is released, Alexis Smith's part will be larger than that of Joan Fontaine? Could be.

The story of how George "Bulleta" Durgom got into the movies is a scream. He went over to visit Glenn Miller and his band on "Orchestra Wife" set, and was introduced to Director Archie Mayo, who always has an ear out for funny gags. "Bulleta" are fast and furious, which so intrigued Mayo that he offered him a five-week contract at $100 a week to write gags, but they were so funny, as he told them, that Archie put him in as an actor. He had no more idea of becoming an actor than you have.

The Veloz and Yolanda dance concert was charming, and Vincente Gomez, that fellow who makes his guitar speak, was thrilling. He played three special compositions of his own, and I predict he'll soon be doing a concert of his own at the Philharmonic.

"Tango Yolanda" brought down the house. Place was packed with youngsters, mostly kids working in the munitions factories, who've rarely had an opportunity to see this kind of entertainment before.

Loose-Leaf Notebook

New York, May 11.

Because the flying recruits seek service only as pilots and to bolster the enlistment of aviation crewmen, Rodgers and Hart were asked by the Army to white a song, called "Song of the Bombardiers." Lawrence Tibbett may introduce it—broadcasting from a bombardier's station in a plane . . . While the Japanese diplomats were interned at the Greenbrier Hotel, Kurusu—the man who "negotiated" while Tokyo was planning its attack on Pearl Harbor—had his meals in his room. He ordered steaks and directed that none of the others, downstairs, be served any meat. "I don't want them to get used to food which they won't be able to get at home," he explained . . . Lin Yutang will edit a 1000-page "Wisdom of India and China."

Last week the American Academy of Arts and Letters presented its $1000 awards at a dinner where Lewis Mumford made one of the speeches. He discussed literature and the duties of writers in this changing world. In the manuscript he prepared Mumford decried the "Hollywoodizing" of great literary documents. He criticised the famous Bill of Rights broadcast—a one-hour program of dramatization, in which Jimmy Stewart, Orson Welles and other stars participated. Mumford preferred that the great document merely be read by a justice of the Supreme Court . . . But that portion of Mumford's prepared address was eliminated. He was reminded that the academy's prize in radio was being presented to the deserving Norman Corwin—who produced, directed and wrote that now historic "Bill of Rights" broadcast.

Clifford Odets, who is writing the movie biography of George Gershwin, has written a role for Oscar Levant in that picture. Levant will be and play himself . . . Elliot Paul, whose book, "The Last Time I Saw Paris," now is on every best seller list, wired the good news to Secretary Morgenthau . . . "Maria," the sculptress whose first one-woman show opens at the Valentine Galleries here, is really Senhora Carlos Martin, wife of the Brazilian Ambassador. She refuses to use her full name in her art work lest it be considered a capitalization on her status as ambassadress. That's why, when Nelson Rockefeller purchased her figure of Christ for the Modern Museum of Art, she insisted on signing it "Maria." Another of her figures also has been purchased by the Metropolitan Museum.

The premiere of Abbott and Costello's "Pardon My Sarong" will be held in Costello's home town, Paterson, N. J. The proceeds will go to St. Anthony's Church, where Costello worshiped . . . This week Bloomingdale's will sponsor an unusual series of broadcasts—urging women NOT to buy. It's part of the material conservation program, to instruct women how to take care of the items they have . . . The Atlantic Monthly will resume, in August, the serialization of Ruth Gordon's diary, "Look in Your Glass" . . . In the El Morocco this week a debutante was asked: "Did you go to the public school for your sugar ration card?" "Public school!" she haughtily answered. "No. I went to a private school."

Beatrice Kay is telling of the Ostrich village, which was about to be attacked by enemy planes. Due preparations were made . . . And when the enemy planes arrived the Ostrich plane spotter shouted the warning: "Quick, everyone. Blackout!" And immediately they all closed their eyes.

George M. Cohan saw a private screening of his "Yankee Doodle Dandy," and wired Jim Cagney, using his famous curtain line: "My Dear Double. My father thanks you; my mother thanks you; my sister thanks you and I thank you" . . . Lana Turner has been summoned back to Hollywood by her studio . . . Pierre Lazareff, who edited the Paris Soir and wrote the book, "Deadline," has celebrated his newspaper anniversary in many ways—but the strangest of those celebrations took place last week. In honor of his twenty-fifth anniversary as a newspaperman, he was given a party by Germaine Aussey aboard the Ringling Circus' private train, parked on the tracks in the Bronx.

The 'Customer's Man' Hits His Stride

Detroit, May 11.—Newest hero of Detroit fans is a fellow who is hitting only .220. He's the customer's man, though, is Jimmy Bloodworth, the second baseman the Nats discarded in last winter's deal with the Tigers. With that fraction of a hit per game which Bloodworth has been averaging, he has been driving in a mess of runs for the Tigers.

POVICH

Moving runs across the plate always was a habit of Bloodworth, even when he was with the Nats, but his record with the Tigers has been particularly imposing. At last reports, Stan Spence was leading the league in run-production with 24, but as of today Bloodworth had driven in 19 runs, despite the fact he is leading off the Detroit batting order, a spot that is not supposed to be conducive to run-production.

Manager Del Baker has a great affection for Bloodworth, whose presence with the Tigers has cleared up a messy second base situation. "We suffered for a couple of years after Charley Gehringer slowed up," said Baker, "but with Bloodworth around, we're getting great second base protection. I've been trying to get him away from Washington for three years and I was surprised when they offered him to us last winter. I don't think there's a second baseman in the league with a better throwing arm."

"Another thing," says Baker, "Bloodworth is naturally a happy kind of kid and that helps. He doesn't have to get his hits to be happy. Whenever we win, he considers he's had a great day. There are too many ball players who reckon such things by the hits they've made, and you may have that kind."

Baker Wins Despite One Failure

Baker considers himself the winner in the trade he made with Washington last winter despite the fact that Roger Cramer, the other player obtained by Detroit in the deal, is hitting only .200, which for an outfielder is a pretty horrible average.

"Cramer has been giving us great protection in centerfield," says Baker, "and everybody knows that he'll be around that .300 figure before long. Cramer has been hitting in hard luck ever since the season started, with line drives going into somebody's gloves. The deal is turning out all right for us with Bloodworth getting those runs across the plate."

For Washington, however, the deal with Detroit has been a black chapter in the trading episodes of Clark Griffith. Bruce Campbell has been doing well enough in the Washington outfield with his batting average of .300, but Frank Croucher, the other tradee from the Tigers, hasn't lifted a hand to help the Nats thus far this season.

Croucher has been about as useful to the Nats as a foul tip. His throwing arms has been sore since the first week he reported, and the ailment is proving so mysterious that doctors are reluctant to say when he can play ball again. Until he made an appearance as a pinch hitter in the Wshington line-up the other day, Croucher was assuming the status of a myth to Washington fans.

There is no recourse for the Nats in L'Affaire Croucher. There is no evidence that his arm was sore when the deal was made, otherwise the Washington club might demand that Judge Landis annul it. When last seen with the Tigers, Croucher was throwing well, and their responsibility ended when they turned him over to the Nats sound of limb. Any injuries he incurred in the Nats' training camp became Washington's tough luck.

The Auto City Still Tops in Baseball

Detroit is still the best baseball town in the majors, despite the growing reputation of Brooklyn as a hotbed. The test is the fans' support when they don't have a winning team, and this year the Tigers are drawing more fans than during the corresponding period of last season when the Tigers were defending the American League pennant.

For years Detroit has been the best week-day town in the American League. Other cities may come up with huge weekend crowds, but day in and out, none pulled them in at home like the Tigers, who made a rich man of the late Frank Navin, and helped pull visiting clubs out of the red.

Attendance at Briggs Stadium doesn't seem to have suffered since the departure of Hank Greenberg into the Army and the trading of Buck Newsom to Washington. The Tigers would be the biggest moneymakers in the league except for the fact that Owner Walter O. Briggs operates with probably the greatest overhead in the league aside from his payroll. The Tigers have the most expensive ground crew in baseball, an incredible sprinkler system for the field, more office clerks than any other club, and not only a trainer to administer to the athletes, but a Swedish masseur as well.

Toboggan Handicap Is Won by Omission

$550 Horse Beats Overdrawn by a Nose In Inaugural, Bringing Backers $18.70

By the Associated Press

New York, May 11.—Belmont Park opened the spring season for fashion, society and the two-buck better today, but it turned out to be bargain day when cheap little Omission came on to whip the high-priced gallopers in the featured Toboggan Handicap.

The 4-year-old son of Jock, who was bought by Victor Emanuel for $550 in the Saratoga yearling sales ring three years ago, boosted his earnings to $53,145 by standing off a long, hard drive to finish a nose in front of Overdrawn, from the barn of George D. Widener, Belmont's new president.

Widener, who recently succeeded Navy-bound Alf Vanderbilt as head of this spacious layout, did all right for himself, however, before the 19,783 cash customers who turned out for the first day's fashion parades, racing and society gatherings.

His Overdrawn and Rosetown not only ran two-three back of Omission in the Toboggan, but in the co-feature, the Fashion Stakes for 2-year-old fillies, he sent Pomrose out to win it and Stefanita to run third. This was worth $7850 to Pomrose, compared to the $5425 Omission got for his triumph.

Both of the events were run down the Widener straightaway, which bisects the 1½-mile track. Omission clicked off the Toboggan three-quarters in 1:10 4-5. Pomrose, finishing half a length in front of Nydrie Stable's Driven Snow, was clocked in 0:52 2-5 for the Fashion's 4½ furlongs.

Under Johnny Gilbert's neat handling, Omission stayed off the pace through the first half-mile, as the favored Ocean Blue, from Crispen Oglebay's barn, led the parade with R. J. Kleberg's Dispose and Overdrawn challenging him. At the quarter-pole, Gilbert gave the dark brown colt his head, and he went up to run to the wire with the others, finally getting the nose decision. For the victory, he returned his supporters $18.70 for each $2 ticket. As the choice in the Fashion Stakes metting, Pomrose paid $9.20.

Gus Dorazio Decisions Harry Bobo

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, May 11.—Harry Bobo's campaign for a title bout with Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis came to an abrupt end tonight, at least temporarily, when Gus Dorazio, a 13-to-5 underdog, pounded out a 10-round decision in a savage bout at the Arena.

Bobo, hard hitting Pittsburgh Negro who jumped into prominence recently with a one-round knockout of Lem Franklin, staggered the veteran Philadelphia Italian twice in the first round, but couldn't put over the finishing punch.

Gus came back to stun Bobo in the fourth and in the sixth closed Harry's right eye with a terrific left.

A crowd of 7500 roared approval when the decision was announced.

Jenkins-Byrd Bout Off Until Tomorrow

Hot Springs, Ark., May 11 (AP).—A bout between Lew Jenkins, former world champion lightweight, and Jack Byrd of Blytheville, Ark., scheduled for tonight was postponed to Wednesday night because of the weather, R. R. Ackerman, promoter, announced this afternoon.

Indians Win On Fleming's 3-Run Homer

Cleveland Again Rallies in Late Innings to Beat Detroit Tigers

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, May 11.—Les Fleming's three-run homer in the ninth inning today climaxed an uphill battle for the Cleveland Indians and gave them an 8-to-5 victory over the Detroit Tigers.

The rookie first baseman's circuit clout punched across the winning runs after an eighth-inning tribal scoring spree that netted five runs to tie up the ball game.

After his teammates jumped on Vernon Kennedy and Steve Gromek for five runs on three hits in the first, Dizzy Trout held the tribe scoreless for seven innings.

Oris Hockett, lead-off batter, started the fireworks in the eighth on a line single and Buster Mills advanced him to second on another single.

Manager Lou Boudreau flied out but Heath hit the third single of the inning to score Hockett and advance Mills to second.

The rookie center fielder raced home after Fleming slapped a single to right center. Heath moved on to third.

Charley Fuchs, who replaced Trout, was greeted with Ken Keltner's double, which scored Heath and sent Fleming to third. Fabian Gaffke, pinch hitting for Ray Mack, was safe at first on a fielder's choice, and Fleming scored from third when Catcher Birdie Tebbetts dropped the ball for an error.

Unnerved, Fuchs let go with a

Bell Tower Wins Opening Feature At Suffolk Downs

By the Associated Press

Boston, May 11.—Suffolk Downs horse track opened its eighth season before a crowd of 15,000 as Ben F. Lister's Bell Tower beat the favorite, Mrs. Louise Palladino's Little Beans, by a length in the featured $2000 Town Lyne Handicap.

Little Beans was virtually left at the gate, but came up fast, overhauled the field going to the three-eighths pole and made his bid at the top of the stretch.

The Palladino entry, however, could not hold Bel lTower, which captured the race in the final 50 yards, covering the mile in 1:38 3-5, and bringing backers $7.80, $2.50 and $2.40. Little Beans paid $2.40 and $2.20. Third went to Mrs. Dorothy Roberts' Jay Stevens, which brought $3.20.

Nats Grant Newsom's Wish Today—He'll Face Tigers

By a Staff Correspondent

Detroit, May 11.—Back on the scene of his triumphs and tragedies with the Detroit Tigers, Buck Newsom tomorrow takes the mound for the Nats in the opener of a two-game series. He asked for the job. Into the town where he was a hero in 1940, and a bum in 1941, big Newsom swaggered today as a member of the Nats, and one of his first acts was to announce his arrival to General Manager Jack Zeller of the Tigers. Newsom, still gloating over his one-hit shutout victory over the Tigers last week in Griffith Stadium, placed himself squarely on the spot by telephoning Zeller, who had tried to cut his salary $20,000 before selling him to Washington.

"My friend, I'm here with a little present for you," Newsom said to Zeller in mock fondness. "I'm gonna shut your Tigers out again tomorrow. How does it feel to be shut out with one hit?"

In a great show implicit confidence in himself, Newsom added: "I only wish it was a Sunday, so I could beat you all in front of a packed park."

Newsom's presence tomorrow won't do the crowd any harm at that. In Detroit there are fans who still remember Big Buck's heroics for the pennant-winning Tigers in 1940 and the three starts he made in the World Series. And a hefty portion think he was done wrong by Detroit in the salary squabble.

Newsom's pitching opponent is expected to be Hal Newhouser, the left-hander who opposed Buck in Washington last week when Roger Cramer's third-inning triple was the only hit Newsom gave his old mates.

There will be a new face in the Washington line-up. It will belong to Mike Chartak, the outfielder bought from the Yankees yesterday. Chartak will take over the sun field job and Manager Bucky Harris is contemplating another change in his outfield.

Against left-handed pitching Harris will bench Bruce Campbell and

'Love Feast' Ends With Slugging

Father-in-Law Tangles With Boxer After Christening; Title Bout in Balance

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, May 11.—Heavyweight Billy Conn displayed a broken left hand today and said he got it last night in a fight with his father-in-law, Jimmy Smith, when what Billy thought was to be a "love feast" ended in blows.

The injury—to Conn's meal-ticket maulie—may blast Pittsburgh Billy's chance of meeting Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis in their second title match, slated for June 25.

Louis knocked out Conn in the thirteenth round of their fight last June. A few days later, Conn, braving the stormy objections of Smith, married Smith's daughter, Mary Louise, a former model. Billy and Jimmy, a former major league ball player, haven't had any kind words for each other since.

The former light heavyweight champion's manager, Johnny Ray, said Conn's hand would be given another examination before a decision is made on kissing off—at least temporarily—the match with Louis.

Billy's hand, the rapier-like weapon which won him ring prominence, was heavily bandaged when he departed for New York today to resume his duty as an Army private. There were scratches on his face.

Christening First

The Conn-Smith bout, in the kitchen of the Smith home, followed by a few hours a christening ceremony for the Conns' baby son, Conn, stationed at Fort Wadsworth, N. Y., came home on furlough to attend the christening. He returned by plane to New York today to confer with Promoter Mike Jacobs.

Conn's version was this:

Smith, through a friend, invited him to the Smith home, with the explanation that he wanted to "bury the hatchet." Conn said:

"Well, I went over, but instead of a love feast it turned out to be the same old thing. He wanted to argue. We had some words in the

Charles Town Seeks 18-Day Meet to Aid War Relief Fund

By a Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., May 11.—Beverly Broun, chairman of the West Virginia Racing Commission, here for the opening of the annual spring meeting of the Charles Town Jockey Club, Inc., announced that application was made this afternoon by a committee composed of Albert J. Boyle, William Perry and Leeds K. Riely to hold an 18-day meeting (June 15-July 4) for the benefit of Army and Navy Relief and West Virginia charities.

The meeting would be held on the grounds of the Charles Town Jockey Club and through the cooperation of the West Virginia Commission, and the committee making the application would operate as the West Virginia Turf Fund. The track and all its equipment will be turned over without compensation of any kind to the West Virginia Turf Fund committee.

The pertinent facts outlined in the application, are:

All winning jockeys' fees will be paid in war bonds and stamps in the amounts over regular fee.

No salaries will be paid to those managing the turf benefit fund meeting, nor will they receive any compensation for same.

The first $100 of the winning purse will be paid in war bonds and stamps.

Wilson's Six-Run Rally Big Factor In Viking Defeat; Webb Proves Star

Moved up a day on the spur of the moment, the regular two-game Tuesday schedule of the public school baseball series proved the most startling of the season yesterday.

Western, the "perfect" schoolboy club, suffered its first setback at the hands of an invading Tech nine, 5-4, in 11 innings. Central, co-leader with Western in the annual race, dropped down a notch as Wilson's scrappy forces rallied for a 9-6 margin, earning a first place tie on their home lot.

To Sammy Webb, red-headed brother of Tech's 1941 star pitcher, Buddy, went most of the credit for the defending champion Westerners' downfall yesterday. Sammy tossed a 10-hit game at the leaders to beat them the first time this year, but it took a long time to do it.

Curtis Clinches Game

Finally it was Outfielder Tom Curtis who gave young Webb a well-earned decision. In the top half of the eleventh, with mates on first and second, Curtis singled Schmelz home. Webb saw to it that the lead remained safe in the last half inning.

Clarence Kuldell and Charley Hines, the Raiders' stellar mound duo, had a fling at Tech batters, between them allowing 11 safeties.

Central, with its touted line of sluggers, clever pitching and good fielding, was little more impressive than Western. It built up a five-run lead in the first three innings but thereafter was banged mercilessly by Wilson. Six Tiger runs in the fourth wiped out all previous Vikings efforts, and three more clinched matters in the next frame.

Plenty of Slugging

That big fourth inning of Wilson's was due entirely to slugging, with no errors involved. Five singles, doubles by Farnham and Jawish and a single walk brought all the runs in.

Aaron Weisenberg, who had given the Vikings two earlier victories, was knocked from the box in the fifth, and Harry Wolfe took over. He pitched hitless ball the rest of the way but the 12 hits off Weisenberg had already done the damage.

Jack Ogle, in spite of hitting three batsmen, hurled a respectable 10-hit game for Wilson, fanning six and issuing only two passes. He was the only Tiger who failed to hit cleanly off Weisenberg.

Sen. O'Mahoney To Attend Griffith Testimonial Here

Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney of Wyoming yesterday reserved the first plate to the testimonial luncheon to be sponsored jointly by the Army Emergency Fund and Washington Citizens Committee for Navy Relief Societies for Clark C. Griffith, veteran Washington club president, at the Mayflower Hotel on Wednesday afternoon, May 27, at 12:30 o'clock.

A city-wide interest was evidenced and other plates were reserved yesterday for this testimonial which is to honor a public spirited man who is making the ball park's facilities available for both Army Emergency and Navy Relief enterprises.

Plates will be available at $2.50 each and reservations will be made available through Fred G. Spaulding, campaign director of the Washington citizens committee for Navy Relief, at EXecutive 0040 between 10 a. m. and 4 p. m. on week days. Tickets are to go on sale at Navy Relief headquarters, 1721 I Street Northwest, tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock. Both men and women are invited to attend the testimonial.

'Old Guard Scroll' Up for Golfers

New York, May 11 (U.P.).—Old time golf champions will have the opportunity to compete for a special award, "the old guard scroll," in the Hale America National Open golf championship at Chicago June 18-21, the United States Gold Association announced today.

This sentimental touch was suggested by Sports Writer Grantland Rice, who will head a special committee to select the contenders in the "old guard" division. Among those likely to be considered are Bobby Jones, Walter Hagen, Chick Evans, Gene Sarazen, Jock Hutchinson, Willie MacFarlane, Max Marston, Tommy Armour and others.

Suicide Legion Will Perform Tonight Despite the Blackout

A scheduled blackout to take place between 10 o'clock tonight and 2 o'clock tomorrow morning will not alter the plans of determined Track Manager Tom Lane, who will feature one-legged movie stunt champion, Ken Butler, and his Hollywood Suicide Legion of Daredevils at the West Lanham (Md.) Speedway tonight at 8:30 o'clock.

Lane, who is to terminate motorized activities at Lanham because of gasoline rationing with a midget automobile racing program Friday night at 8:30, said so late yesterday.

"We will comply with blackout regulations to the letter if the emergency arises," Lane said, "but I feel reasonably confident that we will have created our crash show before the lights are ordered doused.

"We did not have sufficient notice in which to cancel, or postpone, our show and I feel that by going ahead the breaks will come our way. The blackout is to last not more than 30 minutes, and we will be prepared to take care of any situation that arises."

In the event the lackout occurs between 10 and 11 o'clock, ample protection is assured the cash customers inasmuch as Lane himself is an air raid warden in Maryland.

Butler's Hollywood Suicide Legion features two thrill producers in the one-legged Butler himself and in Eddie Payne, miracle man motorcyclist. They topline a cast of 14 stuntsmen in a two-hour production involving 17 events.

Pro-Lady Golf Play To Worsham-Meckley

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Lewis Worsham, jr., the Burning Tree pro, and Mrs. Betty Meckley, Kenwood's Maryland State champion, tossed a pair of sterling approach shots to the eighteenth green and holed their respective putts to win the Pro-Lady Tournament yesterday at Kenwood by a two-shot margin. The pro had 73, his partner 78-2, 76 for 149.

Worsham, well over the green in three after catching an explosion shot clean, and Mrs. Meckley, 100-yards short in two, each spanked short irons dead to the stick and rapped home putts to overcome the last-hole jitters which had gripped several players in the field.

Host Pro George Diffenbaugh, himself a six-shooter on the par four finishing hole, won the pro sweepstakes with a one-over par 72, and, as low scoring pro for the day, was awarded a $25 defense bond by the District Women's Golf Association, cosponsors of the tournament with the local professionals.

Worsham Two Over Par

Worsham, winner of both previous pro tournaments this year and also victor with Mrs. J. W. Godfrey in the only Pro-Lady last year, was two over par with a 73, including a double bogey six on the ninth. Mrs. Meckley, low gross scorer in the Keefer Cup, only previous women's event, posted a pair of consistent 39s with nothing over five including a birdie on the fifth, pars on three of the toughest one-shot holes and the winning four on the eighteenth.

Worsham and his former boss at Chevy Chase, Bob Barnett, divided second money in the pro sweepstakes with 73s, both with 36-37.

Second place in the Pro-Lady play went to the team of Al Houghton, Prince Georges pro, and Mrs. W. R. Stokes, Manor's District champion, with a 151 net total compared to the 149 of the winners. Houghton was out in even par 35, only one of the day, but he had to hit the little white pellet 41 times coming back for a 76, while Mrs. Stokes played a fine round of 78, despite a five on the par-three eighth hole, and deducted three handicap shots for 76-75, 151.

Barnett-Maxwell Third

Barnett and Mrs. M. M. Maxwell of Columbia totaled 152 for the third-place score in the combined score, minus women's handicap event. Barnett's 75 plus Mrs. Maxwell's 90-11, 79, was just one shot better than the Chevy Chase pro's score with his other partner, Mrs. L. G. Pray, Manor, who had 84-4, 80, 153.

Clagett Stevens, making his competitive debut at the new Manor pro, was a major victim of the eighteenth hole jinx. Coming to the long 4 with par for a 72, Stevens was trapped in two, still in the sand in three, on the green in four and down in three putts for a seven and 75.

Mrs. Helen Hicks Harb made her first and last appearance here playing as a District pro as the former national champion and outstanding woman professional is moving to Boston with her husband, Whitney Harb, later in the week. Mrs. Harb was out in 38, but also found the back nine tougher for a 41 and 79.

wild pitch to Otto Denning. Keltner took third and scored on the next play when Denning was thrown out at first.

Oscar Grimes, batting for Tom Ferrick, made the third out, Rudy York getting him unassisted.

In the ninth Hockett was safe on a bunt. Mills got a fielder's choice. After Boudreau sacrificed, Heath walked, setting the stage for Fleming.

Dykes Will Send His Chisox 'Find' Back for Seasoning

By the Associated Press

Chicago, May 11.—Manager Jimmie Dykes of the White Sox said today he intends to send his young rookie "find," Outfielder Harry Sketchley, back to the minors before May 15, deadline for reducing personnel to 25 men.

"He needs seasoning and plenty of it," Dykes commented.

A shortage of outfielders forced the use of the U. C. L. A. collegian in early games and he bore out Dykes' opinion that he had a great chance of developing into a first rate player.

Dykes indicated that his next stop probably would be Waterloo, Iowa, of the Three Eye League.

Devitt Prep Beaten, 14-10, By Little Hoyas

Surviving a desperate Devitt Prep rally toward the end, Georgetown Prep walked off with a 14-10 baseball verdict yesterday in a six-inning clash at Garrett Park.

Led by Tony Beyer, shortstop, the Little Hoyas pushed home five runs in both the second and third innings to win comfortably with a total of 11 hits. Beyer collected three of them himself—a double and two triples—in four times at bat.

Don Miller limited Devitt to eight safeties and struck out eight men to out-hurl two Devitt moundsmen.

move Bobby Estalella to the outfield. There are no complaints with Estalella's outfield play, but at third base he has been no great help to the club defensively. However, Harris wants Estalella's bat in the lineup somewhere. Bob Repass would take over Estalella's third base job. In the late innings at Yankee Stadium the other day Harris in desperation installed Repass at third base and the only two chances he had were difficult ones which he handled with precision.

Catcher Jake Early, whose .180 batting average has been an anchor to Nats, today visited a Detroit occulist to be fitted for glasses which he will wear at the plate.

Harris' new batting order will post Jimmy Pofahl at the top with Chartak hitting in third place.

The Nats haven't had a badly pitched ball game in almost a week and Harris' staff is beginning to justify the nice things said about them in the South, even with Dutch Leonard's broken leg in a cast.

Three Golf Events Mark Card Today

Washington Golf and Country Club's women's golf committee will play host on the annual Phyllis Keeler Miller Memorial event today while at Woodmont the Metropolitan section titlist in the Schoolboy Golf League will be crowned when unbeaten Bethesda and Georgetown Prep meet.

The third event on the day's links calendar is the annual get-together of the golfing members of the Country Club Bowling League for an 18-hole handicap sweepstakes affair at Congressional Country Club. Some of the best amateurs in town will compete in the afternoon play, to be followed by a dinner.

The Keeler Miller play at Washington will attract a field of 66, with play in twosomes. Visiting caddies will be permitted. Mrs. Betty P. Meckley is defending champion in the 18-hole handicap play.

Bethesda's golfers rank as favorites over the defending champion Little Hoya outfit in the schoolboy championship match, although the teams have identical records of five victories and no defeats. The former's record is more impressive in meetings with the same schools. Roosevelt is already the public high champ.

GOLF NOTES—Karl Kuster, Manor's assistant pro, leaves today for a New York Army camp. The 21-year-old golfer enlisted last Friday and took his physical examination yesterday. His departure leaves Pro Clagett Stevens without an assistant just 10 days after taking over the job. Al Jamison was giving a lesson to a first-time golfer on the East Potomac driving range and his feminine pupil shanked a shot which killed a robin. That's the first birdie on record without having actually played the game. . . . Walter Bogley, assistant to Al Houghton as pro and president at Prince George Club, hasn't won either of the pro affairs he has entered, but he is satisfied. Walter has tied Houghton with a 77 and yesterday a 76. . . . Hale America entries close tomorrow morning at 110 o'clock with the U. S. G. A. offices in New York. . . . Lewis Worsham, jr., has now won three pro tournaments, but missed out in the only other of the season and the one he wanted most, the National P. G. A. qualifying rounds.— M. W. W.

Zany Baseball Game Slated at Stadium

Baseball novelty stunts that have pleased fans all over the country will be introduced at Griffith Stadium Friday night, when the Ethiopian Clowns and the original House of David nine tangle in a twilight game at 6:30 p. m.

These teams are the outstanding exponents of baseball showmanship touring the Nation. The Clowns, winners of the enver national semi-pro championship tournament last August, are uniquely garbed, play under such assumed tags as Wahoo, Tarzan, Selassie, and the like, and perform a number of hilarious stunts, including a shadowball exhibition, fishing act and others.

Briton Marvels at Sports in America, Recalling Havoc of War in England

English Tennis Star Praises Americans for Continuation of Sports

By Elsie Carper

Irene Edwards, British International tennis player now attached to the Embassy in Washington visited The Post Friday night. Surprised at the size of the paper the Post puts out each day, she pointed out that the big London dailys have been reduced by the acute paper shortage to four-page editions.

After touring the building and watching the paper go to press, Miss Edwards talked of sports in England, the war, and her perilous trip to America last December.

Sports, she reported were completely disrupted in Engand by the war.

"You Americans have been wiser than were the British in continuing organized sports. At the outbreak of war we tore up our cricket and hockey fields, honeycombed them with ditches and set up poles to prevent their use as landing fields by enemy planes. Barbed wire strung along beaches, and the shortage of water that drained all pools discontinued swimming as an organized sport. Hunting was abandoped as the shortage of food became so acute that there was an insufficient amount to feed the hounds. However, the situation has been remedied by the armed services which have organized sports for both men and women."

Played With King

Few of the famed English tennis courts have been left intact. Many were bombed during the dark days of 1940, but Wimbledon escaped. However, the sound of ball on turf has not been heard there since September of 1939. Wimbledon, the scene of the great international matches, is used as a pig farm and first-aid station.

Of her own career, Miss Edwards is reluctant to speak. She modestly attributes her success to luck and good partners, but with provocation admitted to having won the Swiss Singles championship in 1936 over such a formidable opponent as Mme. Rene Mathieu, the No. 1 player of France, and in 1938 and '39 the Hungarian mixed championship.

Year before the war she toured the Continent playing in every capital but Madrid.

"The most thrilling partner I ever had was King Gustav of Sweden, known among tennis players as Mr. G., and as a very keen player, who was always to be found on the French Riviera."

Von Cramm in Army

She spoke rhapsodically of the Swiss tournaments, of playing tennis by night and skiing by day, and of trips to Cannes, Nice and Monte Carlo.

Roumania, she remembers, as a country of great poverty. Sports equipment could only be obtained by barter and was used by dozens of players before being exchanged for something else.

In speaking of several of her former tennis partners and adversaries, Miss Edwards' blue eyes snapped with indignation and her cultured English voice became strained.

"Von Cramm is in the front line German army; Jean Borotra, the French Davis Cup player is head of sports in Nazi occupied France; and Menzel, the Czech, was last winter helping Lord Haw Haw on the wireless."

But for the French Mme. Mathieu, whom she defeated in Switzerland, she had nothing but praise. Mathieu is serving in Britain as commandant of the Women's Division of the Free French forces. Of British players now in America she would not speak.

Ice Tennis

Miss Edwards has not played lawn tennis since the outbreak of hostilities. But in 1940 before the Luftwaffe's assault on England, she toured the country playing ice-tennis for British war charities.

Ice tennis, she explained, is played on skates and on a field of ice. All the rules of lawn tennis prevail, but the equipment differs. A wire strung metal racquet is used with a rubber ball. "Ice tennis would never take on as a regular sport," she added, "but it did draw crowds which was the object of the tour."

During the first months of the

Says Famed Wimbledon Is Used as Pig Farm And First-Aid Station

Battle for Britain, Miss Edwards drove an ambulance in London. Later, she took a position with the foreign office, and last December was transferred to Washington.

Her trip across the ocean was a perilous one. Unable to get to Portugal to catch the clipper, she came to America in a small Norwegian freighter attached to the British navy. Five days out from port the freighter was lost from its convoy in a sea so stormy that all lifeboats were swept away and the radio was put out of commission.

"In my cabin I gathered together all of my valuable, some momentoes of my tennis tours, a scarf that I cherished, and I put on what clothing I could under my life belt and waited for the notice to take to the sea. But the ship came through."

After the storm died down the crippled vessel steared for Halifax, no one aboard aware that the United States and the Axis were at war. Although enemy raiders were twice sighted, the ship reached Halifax on Christmas after having been reported lost by the Admiralty.

"I must," commented Miss Edwards, "be a cat with many lives."

Since coming to Washington last January, Miss Edwards has been kept far too busy with her work at the embassy and with speaking before local defense groups on her experiences during the London air raids to play tennis. But before leaving America, she hopes to participate in the national matches. Her only complaint with Washington is that there are no grass courts.

A little worried about the weight she has picked up since coming to the United States, she blames it on American food and a reaction to the strict rationing program that prevails in Britain.

She is the proud possessor of a $65 Studebaker that gets her from the embassy to an apartment on upper Pennsylvania Avenue that the amicable Miss Edwards shares with two newly acquired Washington friends.

kitchen and he said he had promised to give me a licking and he might as well do it then. He asked me if I wasn't afraid of him, and I asked him why I should be.

"He swung a punch at me and we closed in. I broke my hand hitting him on the top of the head and got all of these scratches in the face from his nails. Before I could do much damage to him his friends and relations pulled me off."

Manager Ray moaned:

"That's the second time Jimmy Smith knocked this kid out of the heavyweight championship of the world. You have no idea how his action before the fight last June upset Billy. He didn't sleep or eat for a couple of days before the fight and that kept his weight down. Now, when it looked like a sure thing that Billy would win in the return bout, this has to happen."

And, Ray quipped:

"I didn't get any percentage from that Smith scrap."

Arriving in New York, Conn said that his injury was a clean break and that doctors had told him he would be unable to train for at least a month.

He left immediately for Fort Wadsworth on Staten Island.

When Smith first was informed last June that his daughter and Conn planned to marry he said he would "punch hell out of iBlly."

"I can lick him and he knows it," said Smith at that time.

Today, Mrs. Conn pleaded to be "left alone." She said:

Kcycewski Saves Game In Relief

Cards Win Despite Seven Big Errors; Cody Is Catholic's Winning Pitcher

By the same one-run margin by which it lost an earlier encounter to the Eagles, Catholic University's nine evened its series with American U. yesterday at Brookland, staving off a late rally for a 9-to-8 decision.

Losers in the first C. U.-A. U. game, 8 to 7, the Cards yesterday committed seven errors, but still managed to survive a steady Eagle assault that netted six runs during the last five frames.

Pitcher Cody, who started for C. U., lasted until the final inning, but was necessarily removed in favor of "Sneeze" Kcycewski in the ninth, when A. U. put in a final two-run bid for victory. Cody alowed eight hits during his effort, the same total as handed out by the Eagles' Brown, Kligman and McNab.

The only lead of the losers was hung up in the first inning, when Shanty Shepherd, A. U. catcher, connected for a triple with two mates on base. C. U. came back with a four-run third inning to take the lead and was not threatened until the ninth, despite Outfielder Potter's homer in the sixth.

On the Line

—With CONSIDINE

Down Through the Years With Ed Barrow

New York, May 11.—Pull up a chair (as we did at Yankee Stadium on the occasion of his seventy-fourth birthday yesterday) and listen to Ed Barrow:

"I got into baseball 50 years ago. It has kept me young and in good shape. I quit the game twice, but couldn't stay away from it. Retire soon? Why, I couldn't think of anything worse than not going down to the office tomorrow to work.

CONSIDINE

"My first association with baseball was as a partner of Harry Stevens in Pittsburgh. I had half of the program concession. I had been in newspaper work in Des Moines before that—city editor of the News and Leader for a time—but I thought the soap-selling business would get me more. So I came East to Pittsburgh, went broke, and had to go to work as a desk clerk in the hotel where I went bust.

"That's where I met Stevens. Harry came to New York in 1894, but I stayed in Pittsburgh and ran the program at the park. I sort of fell into the job of managing the Wheeling Team of the Interstate League that year. We were leading the league when it blew up on July 4, then we moved it to another league and won the pennant.

"I went from there to Paterson, N. J., of the Atlantic League. They made me president of the league just before the Spanish-American War, and somehow we held it together all through the war. I guess the main reason for that was that I found Hans Wagner.

"He was living in Mansfield, Pa., now Carnegie. I went there, walked down a railroad track looking for him and finally nailed him in a little pool hall run by his older brother. I signed him to a contract. A hundred and a quarter a month. He's the greatest bargain I ever found.

$800 Brought Ty Cobb to Detroit

"I moved on to Toronto in 1902. It was in the Eastern League. I stayed there through 1904—won the 1902 pennant—and then Detroit hired me as manager. I got there in 1905 and lined up a couple of pretty fair rookies who were playing in Augusta that year. The better of the two, at least they thought so at the time, was Clyde Engel. They wanted $800 for the other fellow and Detroit finally got him for that. They felt down in Augusta that he showed promise. Sure . . . Cobb.

"I went to Indianapolis, left there and managed Toronto again through part of 1906 and all of 1907, but when we finished last in the league I couldn't take it. I quit baseball and went back to the hotel business in Toronto. That's where I met Mrs. Barrow, and we were married there.

"Well, by 1910 I had the old baseball fever again. I became manager of Montreal. They made me president of the Eastern League in 1911, while in Montreal, and I served seven years doing that . . . and changed the name to the International League. Got it a double A rating, too.

"We had a terrible time during the Federal League war. They raided us right and left and I finally had to borrow money on my own signature to keep Jersey City and Newark operating for us.

"Maybe the league didn't appreciate it, though. It cut my salary in half, for the 1918 season, so I quit. I was ready to leave baseball again, but when I came down to the lobby of the New York Hotel, where I had quit, I ran into Harry Frazee. He owned the Red Sox, of course. 'I hear you quit,' Frazee said to me. 'How would you like to manage the Red Sox?' I told him I'd do that for nothing. So that season I went to Boston. Frazee scraped together $75,000 and we bought Stuffy McInnis, Wally Schang, Joe Bush and Amos Strunk from Connie Mack. Our Team had been shot to pieces by boys going into the World War, but those replacements made it. We won the pennant. And the series with the Cubs, after the players had put on their sit-down strike.

Babe Ruth Finds Himself in Outfield

"The next year I began using Babe Ruth more as a pinch hitter, and on days when he wasn't pitching I'd put him in the outfield. It got him down after a while, so one day he came to me and said, 'Eddie, I can't do both very good. It's got to be one or the other.' It didn't take me long to make up my mind. I said, 'Babe, you've taken your last turn in the box.'

"In 1920 I came here, and I've been here since. My Yankee teams have won 12 pennants and 8 World Series. Can't kick on that. My all-time team, with just my own players? Well, let me see . . . I'd have to say Gehrig, Gordon Wagner and Rolfe for the infield; Ruth, Coombs and DiMaggio for the outfield; Dickey and Schang behind the plate and . . . this is a little tough . . . Shocker, Hoyt, Ruffing and Gomez.

"The future? Baseball will get through this war and other wars that follow it. For its own good, though, it should go back to seven night games for each team, when the war's over. This is a daytime game. The Yankees will never have lights as long as I'm associated with the club. I don't see any room for improvement, otherwise. Some of the stars of the past would be stars today, but the average big leaguer of 40 years ago couldn't hold a job today."

Poughkeepsie Race Plans Breathing Last, Official's Say

By the United Press

New York, May 11.—Complete cancellation of the Poughkeepsie Regatta, even from its proposed new site near Syracuse, N. Y., may be only a matter of hours, Asa Bushnell, secretary-treasurer of the Intercollegiate Rowing Association, disclosed today.

"The outlook is very black," Bushnell explained. "It seems virtually impossible to obtain a suitable date for holding the regatta because of the changed academic schedules, due to the war, among colleges that might compete."

A tentative shift to Lake Onondaga near Syracuse, June 4, was made necessary when war conditions forced abandonment of the Hudson River course at Poughkeepsie, N. Y. If the regatta is canceled, it will be its first cancellation since the depression year, 1933. It was not held in the 1917-18 war years and in 1919.

Contributions For Service Men's Fight Fund Grow

A $10 contribution from Sam Sheer has swelled the service man's ticket fund to $229. This fund, inaugurated by a $200 donation, will buy tickets to the Navy Relief boxing show May 21 and distribute them to soldiers, sailors and marines of nearby camps.

Already one block of seats has been purchased and a second block will be bought this weekend. Readers can make it possible for the service man to enjoy himself at the Griffith Stadium fights by sending contributions to Post's Boxing Writer, in care of this paper.

Braves Win, 3-2, on Homer By Lombardi

By the Associated Press

Boston, May 11.—The Boston Braves, just about the hottest team in the National League at present, chalked up their eleventh victory in 15 games today with a 3-to-2 win over Philadelphia.

Ernie Lombardi's third homer of the season in the sixth inning was the deciding blow. With Eddie Miller on, Lombardi lifted one over the left field fence to score the two needed runs.

The third-place Braves' first run came in the fifth on a balk by Johnny Podgajny and Sisti was awarded the run.

The Phils' only run off Tom Earley prior to the ninth was a homer by Alban Glossop into the right field stands in the fourth.

The other Philadelphia run came in the last inning on a walk to Ben Warren. An error by Nanny Fernandez and a hit by Tommy Livingston.

Then, with the tying run on third and the winning run on first, Nick Etten ended the game with a long fly to right center, which Holmes reached high to catch.

Equifox Returns To Form, Captures Churchill Purse

By the Associated Press

Churchill Downs, Louisville, Ky., May 11.—Howard Wells' Equifox, a stakes performer with the best last season, returned to winning form today with a smart victory in the Perryville Purse, feature of a lackluster program.

Confidently ridden by the veteran A. Craig, the son of Equipoise came from sixth place in the field of seven to get up in the last few strides to head Mrs. Carl Graham's Boss Hoss by a half length. The latter, in turn, beat Rosedale Stable's Anxiety a head for the place.

Favorite in the betting on the strength of recent works, Equifox paid his backers $4.80 for $2. He was tabbed seven furlongs out of the chute under his impost of 118 pounds in 1:25 1-5.

Charles Town Inaugural to Well Allright in Record Time

7 Furlongs Are Covered In 1:24 4-5

McLeary Star Beats Navy With Root Aboard; D. Scocca Wins on Royal Echo

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., May 11.—Setting a new track record for 7 furlongs, G. D. McLeary's Well Allright drove to a length and a half victory in the Inaugural Handicap, featuring the opening of a month's racing here under the banner of the Charles Town Jockey Club. One of the largest first day crowds in the history of this trim 6-furlong plant saw the battle Son of Whichone outlasted Mrs. E. D. Sauer's Navy by a length and a half. Third money went to Mrs. J. L. Furr's Don Orlan.

Well Allright, capably handled by Jockey Buddy Root, was clocked in 1:24 4-5, two-fifths of a second under the mark set here a year ago by Soldierette. The winner, a cofavorite with Navy., paid a $6.20 mutuel.

B. O. F. Randolph's One Only forged to the front in the opening furlong but Rood had Well Allright under steading restraint and closest to the leader. In the backstretch, Well Allright moved to the son of Only One and took command. One Only then stopped and Navy came into contention.

Root saved ground with Well Allright entering the stretch as Navy began to bear out. In the final drive Well Allright ran straight and true but Navy continued to drift out through the straightaway and, although closing ground, was not up in time to bother the front runner. The jinx number of "1-3" which wins few daily doubles, proved the right one here today. Those in the gathering of 5000 fans who played that combination cashed $31.20.

Randle's Queen, a popular mare with Washingtonians, was made the favorite in the second race and carried the colors of Mrs. L. E. Crowell to victory by 2½ lengths over Purple Dawn with Jean C. in third position.

Railroad War Job Seen Phenomenal

By the Associated Press

Senator Reed (Republican), Kansas, said yesterday the railroads were doing the most phenonemenal job in their history in meeting wartime transportation needs.

Despite a shrinkage in their rolling stock, Reed told the Senate, the roads have performed more service in 1941 than in any other year. Increased efficiency, he explained, more than offset a decrease in the number of freight cars.

Senator Reed said that whether the railroads could meet increased traffic demands depended on several factors, among them the granting of priorities for more engines and freight cars, further improvement in efficiency, cooperation by shipper in more heavily loading cars and quicker unloading, and cooperation by cola consumers in laying in supplies now for next winter.

This compared with March shipments of 1,780,938 tons and April, 1941, shipments of 1,667,8674 tons.

More Drastic 'Policing' System Anticipated If Honor Method of Gas Rationing Fails

Chiseling and the word "honor" are going to make a lot of difference in the pleasure Eastern seaboard motorists get out of their outomobiles after Friday but——.

When Leon Henderson, Price Administrator, said the estimated two to three gallons of gasoline non-essential drivers can expect weekly are a "damned sight more than they are entitled to under the situation," he told only half the story.

There is no present indication of a vast improvement in the Eastern situation from now until the war's end, in spite of all the plans pipelines and increased tank car usage—now being discussed to ease the rationing works, the fact is supplies are short.

One commentator, however, said that if oil companies were allowed higher prices for their products in the East they might have a greater incentive to bring more gas into the area by more costly means.

Henderson said the three gallon allotment to non-essential drivers would affect only about 3,000,000 of the East's 10,000,000 motorists while the remaining 7,000,000 would be given higher allotments for "vocational or necessary purposes."

This latter, larger group includes motorists who will have to state on their "honor" their necessary needs for gas, such as driving to work.

That there will be no surprise if some of the group chisels and abuses the word "honor" was made clear by Henderson when he said he hoped it would not be necessary to ask local ration boards to "take on the policing of gas users." But if "honor" does not work, it is plain that more drastic steps will be taken.

If rationing is extended to other areas of the country, which is being considered, the reasons may not be the same as that in the East where there is an actual shortage.

Partly, they might be psychological to make some sacrifice of pleasure driving national; to conserve rubber, and to a lesser degree to help the East get more gas. Oil men insist there is no shortage of fuel at the wells.

Briefly here is the picture in the East:

In 1941 the average daily arrival on the Atlantic seaboard was 1,550,000 barrels, with 95 per cent of it brought in by tankers, while the estimated daily need this year, increased by expanding industry, was 1,750,000.

But now there are no tankers to carry that load as Petroleum Coordinator Harold Ickes disclosed last week when he said tankers on the East Coast were probably out for the duration, due to Army and Navy needs for them elsewhere.

About 45,000 tank cars—less than one-third of the Nation's 145,000 tank cars—are now bringing to the Eastern seoboard 650,000 barrels daily. It is hoped this figunre may be stepped up to eight hundred thousand barrels.

An additional 175,000 barrels are being brought in every day by pipeline and barges, making a total of 825,000 barrels. That is 925,000 barrels—less than half—below the estimated daily, normal need. It is significant that rationing in the East now provides for less than half of that estimated daily requirement.

There are two other plans, dovetailing into each other, under consideration to step up the inflow.

Oil men explain the plans as follows:

1. A 24-inch pipeline from Texas by way of St. Louis which would bring in an additional 250,000 barrels daily, but such a line would require precious steel. The line was first proposed last summer—it would have cost 85 million dollars—but the idea was abandoned because it was said the steel was needed more for ships. That need is greater now than it was in 1941 and now the line would cost 100 million dollars.

2. Oil men believe that by digging up old pipelines scattered around the country they could provide perhaps a 1400-mile pipeline to the East but to this would have to be added about 250 miles of new line involving new steel.

Some say this salvaged line would be a 12-inch affair, some say 20-inches. If it were 12, it would bring in less than 125,000 barrels.

But even if both projects were carried out the two lines would bring in daily less than 500,000 barrels. Thus all the remedies so far in sight fall short of that estimated 1,750,000 barrels considered the normal Eastern Seaboard need, or even last year's 1,550,000 daily barrels.

A large balancing influence, however, would be this: That motorists in the months ahead can be expected to do less driving to save rubber, and thus as the driving diminished and the oil supply increased the daily, so-called normal, requirements might be met.

Oil men say their companies are taking a beating bringing in gasoline under present prices.

United Gas Sales Set High for Year

New York, May 11 (AP).—Increased demands of industrial, government and municipal customers enabled United Gas Corporation and subsidiaries to establish a sales record in 1941 of 279,382,000,000 cubic feet of natural gas.

This compared with sales of 248,517,000,000 cubic feet in 1940, the corporation's annual report said. United Gas serves the Gulf south area.

Week's Steel Rate To Set New Peak

New York, May 11 (AP).—Steel production this week will set a new record at 1,691,800 net tons with mills operating at 99.6 per cent of capacity, the American Iron and Steel Institute estimated today.

This week's operations, up 1 per cent from the previous period, compared with 98.6 per cent or 1,674,800 tons last week and with the previous high mark of 99 per cent or 1,681,600 tons in the week of March 23.

A month ago mill operations were at 97.2 per cent of capacity, indicating an output of 1,651,100 net tons of ingots, and a year ago the rate was 99.2 per cent of a smaller capacity, or 1,601,000 tons.

WPB Moves To Conserve Cocoa Beans

By the Associated Press

The War Production Board yesterday ordered a 30 per cent reduction in the grinding of cocoa beans, source of the chocolate used in breakfast cocoa, chocolate candy and soda fountain syrup.

The action, which does not regulate deliveries of cocoa products to consumers or industrial users, is effective upon the grinders and pressers of cocoa beans immediately.

It was necessitated, WPB said, by the shortage of shipping space which resulted in imports during the first three months of 1942 equal to only 34 per cent of consumption.

The 30 per cent cut will remain in effect until the end of June, and the percentage for the next three months will depend upon the "supply prospects for that period," WPB stated.

The United States is the world's largest consumer of cocoa beans, which are imported from Africa's gold coast, Brazil and other tropical areas, and consumption amounts to about four pounds per person annually. The greatest use is in candy, cocoa butter and confectionery.

Shipping space allocated to cocoa beans for the last nine months of this year has been cut to 20 per cent of estimated normal consumption, WPB reported. However, this country's supply of cocoa beans on April 1 was around 452 million pounds, or something under a year's supply on an unrestricted basis. The new order is designed to make that supply last about 16 months.

Glass Container Restrictions Issued

Thinner and plainer glass containers were ordered by the War Production Board yesterday, so to permit manufacturers to turn out an estimated 30 per cent more jars, glasses and bottles with the same amount of material.

Beer, ale and other malt-beverage bottles were restricted to three sizes: 12 fluid ounces, 1 quart and one-half gallon.

Bottles containing whisky or other distilled spirits were limited to 1 quart, four-fifth-quart, pint and half-pint sizes, and those for cordials, prepared cocktails and liqueurs to containers holding.

The decree, effective yesterday, also froze all bottle designs to existing molds. Exceptions allow the packing of products never previously packed in glass; the manufacture of lighter glass containers, and the manufacture of glass bottle on machines previously used for other materials.

Colored Sheets Output And Sale Halted

The WPB requested manufacturers of bed sheets yesterday to halt the production and sale of colored sheets with colored edges by July 1. Officials said the action was intended to stretch the limited civilian supplies of dyestuffs as far as possible.

Use of Glycerine Oils Limited

Limited use in food products of soy bean oil, cocoanut oil and other oils having glycerine content, will be permitted during the summer months, the War Production Board announced.

These oils, as well as babassu nut oil, palm kernel oil and others, are an important source of glycerine needed for explosives manufacture, and previously were reserved for that purpose.

Winter Wheat Yield Highest In 10 Years

By the Associated Press

The highest yield per acre and the least abandonment of winter wheat in the last 10 years are indicated by May 1 conditions, the Agriculture Department reported yesterday in estimating the crop would be 646,875,000 bushels.

The per acre yield was estimated at 17.8 bushels, compared with 17 bushels last year and an average of 14.4 bushels in the 1930-39 period.

The low abandonment, expected to be 6.3 per cent, was attributed to the continuously favorable moisture supply in most of the winter wheat States throughout the spring.

Area Sown Is Small

The area sown to winter wheat—38,747,000 acres—was the smallest, except for one year, since 1914, the department said. Its estimate of production compared with an April 1 estimate of 624,983,000 bushels, a crop of 671,293,000 bushels in 1941, and an average of 569,417,000 bushels in 1930-39.

Prospective production, it was explained, allowed for wheat harvested from volunteer acreage, expected to be large this year in Kansas and parts of adjoining States.

Crop prospects in general were characterized as above average except in a few States. During April crop growth in a large Eastern and Southeastern area was retarded by unseasonably dry weather, while frequent rains with local floods and storms delayed farming operations over an area stretching more than 1000 miles from central North Dakota to central Texas and covering the former "dust bowl."

Weather Favorable

Moisture conditions in the Great Plains, where adequate reserves were most needed as protection against summer drought, appear to be better than they have been at this season in a dozen years, the department reported.

"Eastern moisture shortages," the report said, "are locally serious and disturbing, particularly where moisture for germination is lacking and where the growth of grass in pastures and meadows has been checked, but the season is early and major crops with the possible exception of hay are not threatened."

'Loan' of Coffee Stresses Growing Shortage in U. S.

New York May 11 (AP).—The Green Coffee Association of New York has approved a loan of 7500 bags of Colombia coffee to the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. from a growers' association for one month, trade circles reported today.

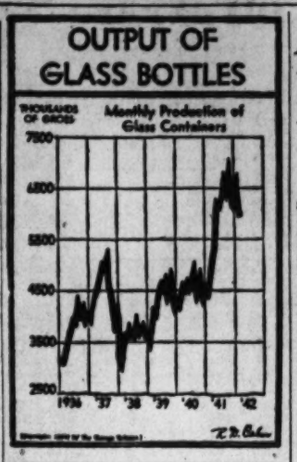
The loan was considered by some sources as indicating a policy under which concerns short of coffee because of shipping difficulties would share in the excess supplies held by more fortunate firms.

The Columbian coffee, from bonded stocks of the National Federation of Coffee Growers of Colombia, was to be replaced by the A. & P. at the end of a month.

Many chain stores have adopted a policy of limiting retail coffee purchases to one pound to a customer, along the lines some followed before sugar rationing began.

Trade circles said this was intended to bring about equitable distribution of the coffee permitted wholesalers, 75 per cent of the amounts handled last year.

Many restaurants, too, especially in the East, were reported conserving coffee by discouraging purchases of a second cup, some by charging extra for it and some through menu notes pointing out that bringing coffee to the United States entailed a dangerous voyage for ships.



Bank Loans Show Decline For 7th Week

By the Associated Press

Commercial, industrial and agricultural loans of banks continued a seven-week downward decline last week.

The Federal Reserve oBard said that these loans in banks of 101 leading cities totaled $6,649,000,000 on May 6, represetning a decline of 77 million dollars in the last week and 386 million dollars in the last seven weeks. These loans, however, were $1,081,000,000 higher than a year ago.

After rising steadily for more than a year because of the defense boom, these loans have been declining lately because of a number of factors, including the refunding of bank loans into corporate securities, retirement of finance company paper due to restrictions on consumer credit, and similar events.

The board's 101-city member bank condition statement gave the following summary of assets and liabilities on May 6, together with the increase or decrease since the previous week and the corresponding week last year (in millions of dollars):

Auto Sales Now, Delivery After War Proposed

New Orleans, May 11.—A plan to sell automobiles now for postwar delivery so that the buyers who pay early would have first priorities on peacetime production was advanced here today by Dr. Rolf Nugent of Washington, chief of the automobile rationing branch of the Office of Price Administration.

Under his proposal salesmen would be kept busy taking orders, the finance companies would handle the deals and advertising agencies would appeal to the public to buy.

"The consumer would make his payments as before," Uugent said in an interview, "and would be entitled to a price discount on the purchase just as he receives on a Government war bond. I have recommendedd that the funds so derived, after commissions and other expenses are deducted, be trusted with the Federal Reserve System."

Asked if he thought the public would take to the plan, he replied that advertising agencies in the country would have to cary on an extensive educational program, and added, "I am convinced that they can do it."

"When you consider," he added, "that after the war the otential demand for automobiles will be enormous and that retooling of the automobile industry alone will require six months to a year, you can readily see that this action will have a far-reaching effect."

Navy Establishes Bank Liaison Unit

Tar Surfacing Work in Md. Cut Sharply

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, May 11.—The annual spring surfacing program for State roads will be restricted, for the present, to those roads where the surfacing is most acutely needed.

This policy was necessary, the State roads commission said today, to do a maximum amount of good with the tar released by the Public Roads Administration in Washington from frozen asphalt and tar stocks.

The whole surfacing program was halted last week when the stocks of both products were completely frozen. Only a fraction of the spring work had been done.

Today, however, orders to resume the work on the roads with the top priority rating went out after the Federal officials notified the commission it could use one-third of the tar set aside for surface treatment and one-half of the tar allotted for patch work.

No asphalt was released from the freezing order.

The district engineers, it was explained, had grouped the road projects in each of the six districts according to need. The roads in the first group would be surfaced under the present allotment of tar and others would be treated if further concessions were made.

The forced limitation of the spring surfacing work, it was said, would result in an immediate lessening of cost but an ultimate increase. Whatever economy effected because tar was not available would be more than wiped out, it was added, by the increased maintenance costs for road deterioration due to lack of surface treatment.

Wardens Want Fulltime Job For Murphy

Approximately 50 of the District's 66 deputy air-raid wardens appointed a committee last night to call on Civilian Defense Coordinator John Russell Young this morning and demand that Battalion Chief Clement Murphy be relieved of his duties with the Fire Department and retained as chief air-raid warden on a full-time basis.

In what was described as a tumultous meeting behind closed doors at Rair-Raid Warden Service Headquarters, 1341 Maryland Avenue Northeast, the deputy wardens instructed the committee to draw up a resolution embodying this and other demands for presentation to young at 11:30 a. m. in the District Building.

The action resulted from Murphy's request last Thursday that Young relieve him of his duties as chief air raid warden so he could devote his entire efforts to his job as drillmaster of the Fire Department Training School. Murphy said he did not feel equal to the task of continuing both full-time jobs.

Want Seniority Retained

The committee was told also to specify that Murphy should lose no seniority or other rights in the Fire Department while on loan to the civilian defense organization and that his salary should be continued.

Members of the committee appointed at the session reported afterward they were undecided as to whether additional demands made by several deputy wardens should be embodied in the resolution.

These, it was reported, included a stipulation that Murphy be given a free hand in direction of the warden service and be made responsible only to Coordinator Young instead of to both Young and Col. Lemuel BBolles, executive director of the District Defense Council.

Another demand, according to wardens present at the meeting, was that all instructions to deputy wardens should come through Chief Murphy, bearing his signature.

Also Ask Aides Be Retained

The committee was instructed further to request the retention of Murphy's assistants, Lieut. William H. Ronan and Pvt. Raymond B. Denton, loaned to civilian defense by the Fire Department. Ronan and Denton had asked to be returned to the department with Murphy.

The committee, which will meet before the conference with Young to draw up the resolution, consists of William J. Mileham, chairman; Fred J. Eden, Leo Pretzfelder, Lieut. Col. M. H. Brinkley, Thomas Sandoz, Max C. Schwartz, Thurston N. Barlow and Dr. Isaac N. Cupid.

It was Mileham who called the meeting and acted as chairman. He described it as an 'indignation meeting."

Virginia Permits Truck Overloads In Special Cases

Richmond, Va., May 11 (AP).—Highway Commissionr James A. Anderson told the Virginia Highway Users Association today that special permits were being issued by the State highway department permitting movement of loads in excess of the statutory maixmum of 35,000 pounds.

He also pointed out that a new load limit of 40,000 pounds would become effective June 27. A tolerance of 5 per cent is allowed, which thus would permit a maximum load of 42,000 pounds.

General Anderson's comments were in the nature of a report on a recent conference in Washington on interstate movement of war shipments.

Col. M. S. Batile, director of the State division of motor vehicles, suggested more highway speed signs for the benefit of out-of-State motorists who may not be familiar with Virginia's new 40-mile limit. He pointed out that North Carolina has a 60-mile maximum and Maryland a top speed of 55 miles an hour.

Approximately 200 trucking firm officials are attending the highway users meeting.

Contract Bridge

Music authority Sigmund Spaeth, had all he could do to make five clubs on this hand. He succeeded when a false card fooled the adversaries.

"As a warm-up for the Westport-New York Commuter's and Overbidder's Club, which should be increasingly active after May 1," he writes, "I played a few rubbers in Pittsburgh recently, and one hand gave me a wonderful opportunity to test the value of an occasional false card.

"Having dealt myself a minor two-suiter, with both sides vulnerable, I boldly opened with one club. The bidding then proceeded as below, with my final bid, of five clubs, doubled, for a probable sacrifice. Here are the hands:

NORTH: ♠ J 6 3 ♡ 9 7 5 ♢ 10 2 ♣ K Q 8 6 3
WEST: ♠ K 9 8 7 ♡ A K Q 6 4 ♢ J 6 ♣ A 10
EAST: ♠ A 10 4 2 ♡ J 10 8 3 2 ♢ 9 7 5 3 ♣ None
SOUTH: ♠ Q 5 ♡ None ♢ A K Q 8 4 ♣ J 9 7 5 4 2

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	1 ♡	2 ♣	2 ♡
3 ♣	3 ♡	Pass	4 ♡
5 ♣	Dble	Pass	Pass
Pass

"The opening lead was the king of hearts. Obviously, the hand had to lose two spades and the ace of trumps; but after trumping the heart opening, I led trumps and prayed hard. West properly switched to spades and when his partner went up with the ace I quakingly dropped the queen from my hand.

"It worked. East looked at the jack of spades in dummy and decided to return a diamond to weakness. The rest was automatic, the dummy's spades going on my diamonds, after removal of the last trump. Five clubs, doubled and made, for the rubber.

D. C. Taxi Officials Tried as Dodgers Of $109,932 Tax

Baltimore, May 11 (AP).—Two District of Columbia taxicab officials today went on trial before a Federal jury on an indictment charging one with defrauding the Government of income taxes totaling $109,932.83 from 1934 to 1938, inclusive, and the other with aiding and abetting the alleged tax evasion.

Defendants were Herbert Glassman, cab company head charged with the alleged evasion, Joseph I. Zucker, bookkeeper and auditor, the Sun Cab Co., district underwriters, and Edward C. Ostrow, coowner with Glassman of the cob concern.

Price Ceilings To Mean Cut in Va. Liquor Prices

Richmond, Va., May 11 (AP).—In conformity with the Office of Price Administration's price ceilings, liquor prices in Virginia will be returned next Monday to the level charged in the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board's stores during March.

The prices of approximately 60 items will be revised downward from 5 cents to $2. Most of the revision will be in imported items, the prices of which have been rising steadily since early in the year.

On July 1, the State's 10 per cent tax, which has been in effect two years, will be repealed, but to the buyers of alcoholic beverages the repeal will be scarcely noticeable. Elimination of the tax will give the board a leeway of 10 per cent in taking care of increased costs of the product, even under the price ceiling.

Rear Admiral Emory S. Land, chairman of the War Shipping Board and of the Maritime Commission, tells of the progress being made in solving the shipping problem, one of our major bottlenecks of this war, when he appears on Columbia's seventy-third "Report to the Nation" over WJSV and the Columbia network at 9:30 tonight.

The entire shipping question, with its problem of shipbuilding, is examined by the "Report." Scriptwriter Joseph Liss points out that this is a global war, very largely dependent for its success on the record-breaking shipbuilding program on which the United States has embarked. By the end of 1942 we hope to put 9 million tons of new shipping on the seas, just equal to the tonnage sunk by the Axis last year.

Tuesday's show comes ten days before observance of National Maritime Day on May 22. A sketch shows how on May 22, 1819, the American steamship Savannah completed at Liverpool the first trans-Atlantic crossing by a steamboat. It had to dodge British cutters on nearing its destination; the British thought the Savannah was on fire and needed rescuing.

Another dramatization tells the story of the American submarine which sank six Jap ships in Nippon waters earlier this year. So far, in five months of war, the United States has sunk 500,000 tons of Japanese shipping.

TERRY AND THE PIRATES

ARE YOU SLIPPING, BEAUTIFUL? NORMANDIE TELLS ME SHE SOCKED YOU FOR POINTING A GUN AT LITTLE MERRILY—AND YOU DIDN'T CUT OFF EVEN ONE OF HER EARS!
THE DRAGON LADY HAS ALWAYS BEEN SELFISH... AS YOU HAVE REMINDED ME BEFORE, RYAN... BUT THIS WAR HAS BROUGHT A NEW SET OF VALUES!

MARY WORTH'S FAMILY

Oh, Brother, What a Mother!

I KNOW WHY THE QUIET MOUSE SUDDENLY BECAME A LIONESS WHEN SHE THOUGHT HER BABY WAS THREATENED... THE MEN IN MY COMMAND MUST OBEY ME WITHOUT QUESTION—AS A CHILD OBEYS ITS PARENTS... I WOULD STAND ALONE AGAINST ANY ODDS TO PROTECT THEM...
FOR THIS DEVOTION, I PROVIDE THEM WITH DIVERSION WHEN THEY ARE NOT CALLED UPON TO OFFER THEIR LIVES.... THE PEOPLE OF CHINA ARE TOO POOR TO GIVE MONEY FOR SUCH PURPOSES — AS DO THE CITIZENS OF YOUR COUNTRY ...MEN FIGHT BETTER WHEN THEY KNOW THEY WILL FIND RELAXATION BETWEEN BATTLES...
THE DRAGON LADY HAS BECOME AWARE OF THESE THINGS... IT IS UNDERSTOOD, THEN, WHY THE CULTURED NORMANDIE STRUCK AS A WILD ANIMAL PROTECTING HER YOUNG..
... BUT RYAN IS NOT TO CONCLUDE FROM ALL THIS THAT THE DRAGON LADY HAS GONE SOFT--- EASY DOES IT, BEAUTIFUL... BELIEVE ME, YOU LOOK VERY WELL WITH YOUR HAIR DOWN!

UNPAINTED FURNITURE
